Hillman, Davis And Stettinius Are Appointed As Advisers

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The Administration yesterday took three additional steps to fortify the defenses of the Nation as European war news definitely increased concern over the fate of democratic government across the Atlantic.

These were the day's outstanding developments:

1. President Roosevelt appointed a seven-member commission to bring about top-speed production of defense implements with a minimum upset in the normal life of the country.

2. The House quickly approved a $2,200,000,000 naval expansion program, calling for 10,000 planes, 16,000 pilots and a ring of bases around the country. It passed, also, the bill to speed up the naval ship building program.

3. To finance it all, Administration leaders projected a three-part tax bill to provide $600,000,000 to $700,000,000 additional revenue yearly, boost the debt limit by $3,000,000,000 and authorize a special defense bond issue to be amortized by the new taxes.

Members Listed

Announcing creation of the advisory defense commission at his press conference yesterday, the President listed the members and scope of their duties as:

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, to supervise the orderly production and delivery of raw materials with which to fill government orders and their treatment up to but not including production of the finished article.

William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, to direct industrial production, completion of the tank and its engine, the plane and its engine, uniforms and all other needed articles.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, in charge of all employment problems, involving training of NYA and CCC youths for noncombatant service, turning out ground crews for planes, radio men and even cooks.

Chester C. Davis, member of the Federal Reserve Board, charged with supervision over farm products, both for domestic use and for export.

Ralph Budd, chairman of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, to handle all transportation matters and prevent jams in delivery of materials or products.

Henderson to Watch Costs

Leon Henderson, member of the SEC, to watch price trends, with a view especially to stabilizing material costs.

Miss Harriet Elliott, dean of women at the University of North Carolina, as an adviser on consumer protection.

The seven have been summoned to confer with the President tomorrow and immediately set to work.

Stettinius and Knudsen will serve on a full-time basis from the start, Mr. Roosevelt said. Hillman on almost full time, Davis will be on part time for a while, Budd defi-

Heavy Cruiser and 2 Destroyers Leave For Portugal

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of the Navy Edison announced last night that three American warships had left this country for Lisbon, Portugal, "for the purpose of the protection of American interests" abroad.

The ships, the heavy cruiser Vincennes and the destroyers Truxton and Simpson, left East Coast ports yesterday, officials said. They are to join the present American European squadron, now based at Lisbon, thereby doubling its strength.

There was no other official explanation of the reason for enlarging the squadron, but it was pointed out that one of the principal purposes given for maintaining the warships abroad is to assist in the evacuation of Americans from war zones.

Edison said the war vessels would not convoy any merchant ships

Tumult Reigns As Texans Vote Party Accord

Harmony Program, Pledged to Garner, Evolves Amid Fights

By the Associated Press

Waco, Tex., May 28.—Texas' own John Nance Garner won the State's 46 votes to the Democratic National Convention today at a tumultuous assembly, where fists flew freely and angry shouts drowned out the words of the keynote speaker.

Finally brought to order by former Gov. Pat M. Neff, of Waco, president of Baylor University, the unruly delegates quickly swung into line behind Garner-Roosevelt "harmony" forces.

Following the pattern drafted when the harmony agreement was reached, the convention unanimously indorsed the Administration of President Roosevelt and directed that the delegation do nothing to embarrass the President.

The delegation, bound by the unit rule, was instructed specifically not to participate in any "anti-Roosevelt" or "stop-Roosevelt" movement at the Chicago convention.

Police broke up numerous fights or near fights. A banner declaring "We Want Roosevelt" was destroyed. A storm of boos swept the auditorium as Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, introduced the keynote speaker, Mayor Tom Miller of Austin.

Earlier in the day Miller, although a leader in the original third-term organization in Texas, was involved in a clash with Maury Maverick, Mayor of San Antonio and ardent third-term supporter. The two gave different versions of the affair.

Miller asserted Maverick made an insulting remark to him, "so I hit him."

Maverick said "Miller started it" by aiming a blow at him which missed. He declined further comment.

Witnesses agreed the two mayors "pushed each other around."

Stock Leaders Halve Losses After Early Selling

New York, May 28 (AP).—Wall Street rode through a heavy squall of selling today on news of the Belgian surrender and the stock market recovered much of its early losses which ranged to more than $7 a share in leading issues.

Losses in many prominent shares were halved as the market regained its composure after the early selling had been absorbed. Down $1 to more than $4 at the close were duPont, Bethlehem, United States Steel, Douglas Aireraft, Kennecott, General Motors, American Telephone and International Harvester.

Too Ostentatious

Is Invasion of Great Britain Hitler's Present Objective?

By Felix Morley
Editor of The Post

IT IS WIDELY assumed that the German High Command, if it can force surrender of the Allied armies now wholly isolated by the Belgian surrender, will shortly order an invasion of Great Britain. And certainly that is the impression the Germans have been seeking to convey.

"For this German army the Channel is merely a brook," says Hitler's own newspaper, the Voelkische Beobachter, which became a Nazi organ as far back as December, 1928. Other German papers echo the idea that a "descent upon England" would be a mere joyride. And Louis Lochner, the Associated Press representative at German staff headquarters, reports seeing there a map showing "how troops were to move in the offensive on England."

It is readily understandable that the Germans should want to create this impression. The mere threat of invasion tends to confine concentrations of troops, mechanized equipment and airplanes to English soil. It makes the dispatch of reinforcements for Paris, via Havre or Cherbourg, seem inadvisable. It has resulted in a military shakeup whereby the chief of the imperial staff has become commander in chief of the

Parliament Backs Cabinet In Repudiating King Leopold

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 28.—The Belgian Senate and Chamber tonight approved the action of the Belgian Cabinet which earlier today disowned King Leopold and decided to continue the fight on the side of the Allies.

Officers of the two houses declared their solidarity with the government and their will to continue the fight until victory.

It was one of the strangest hours in Belgium's history, with the country separated in two parts—the cabinet, legislature and thousands of refguees in France and England still at war with Germany, and millions of Belgians and soldiers and their King remaining under German occupation.

Desperate Straits

[The King decided to capitulate, the United Press said, after informing Allied leaders that his troops were in desperate straits, subsisting on meager rations of hard biscuits for days and in many instances completely without ammunition.

[When Gen. Weygand visited Leopold at Bruges Saturday the King told him the Belgian army could not hold out any longer unless "substantial new assistance was received from the British and French.

[French leaders said Leopold's surrender came without consultation with Allied chieftains, but London dispatches intimated that on Sunday the Allies had tried to dissuade Leopold from taking such a course.]

The news was broken to the French by Premier Reynaud in a radio broadcast after a solemn night of sessions of both the French and Belgian cabinets.

New Army Ordered

Belgium's cabinet issued a proclamation stripping the monarch of his functions, took over his power and ordered a new army to be formed to fight on the side of the Allies.

It was problematical, however, whether the Belgian government could muster a force of such size as to be of any benefit to the British and French.

Leopold was commander in chief of the Belgian army and his order to surrender unconditionally ended the resistance of the great body of

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 28.—A great, desperate offensive from the south to relieve the northern Allied forces—left with the back of its resistance broken by the surrender of the Belgian Army "almost in its entirety"—was declared tonight by the French to be going well for their army.

This fighting was in the region of the Somme. To the east, 30 other Allied divisions of some 450,000 to 640,000 men were poised for a synchronized attack along the Aisne. Upon the outcome of these supreme efforts will depend the fate of the desperately fighting Allies in Flanders.

To the north, where about 300,000 Belgians have become voluntary Nazi prisoners almost to a man, it was admitted that the situation was "very difficult," but the night French communique declared that the hard-pressed Allies were "still fighting with the same determination."

In this area, the Germans, finding the resistance suddenly far lessened, apparently were swinging their northern wing like a great gate to the costline of the English Channel, thus supporting the considerable number of Nazi troops already on the sea.

Warships Shell Boulogne

[Chief Nazi objective on the coast was Dunkerque, major supply port for the Allies in the north. Secondary were Ostend and Zeebrugge, which the Belgians had been protecting. The United Press said, however, that the Allies plan to make these ports useless by sinking ships in the harbor mouths. Meanwhile, British warships were reported to have shelled Nazi-held Boulogne, reducing it to a "shambles."]

The action on the Somme—on the south side of the German corridor to the sea—was officially termed "an important movement," and its details were guarded.

Virtually the entire Allied air force was thrown into the northern breach in an attempt to check the German rush through the gap left by the Belgians. German troop convoys were the targets of mass

Andrews, Holland Win in Florida Primary Run-off

Jacksonville, Fla., May 28 (AP).—United States Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Florida, won renomination in today's Democratic run-off primary over Jerry W. Carter, Townsend-indorsed member of the State railroad commission.

State Senator Spessard L. Holland, of Bartow, had a commanding lead over Francis P. Whitehair, Deland attorney, in the contest for the gubernatorial nomination.

Unofficial reports from 808 of the State's precincts gave Andrews 164,948 votes to 67,260 for Carter, while 973 precincts gave Holland 170,551 and Whitehair, 128,269.

In northwest Florida where a successor to Representative Millard Caldwell, of the Third Congressional District, was being nominated, Farmer Parkhill Mays, of Monticello, was leading Publisher Robert Sikes, of Crestview.

Allies Occupy Part of Narvik As Nazis Retreat

Stockholm, May 28 (AP).—Norwegian and Allied troops were reported tonight to have occupied part of the ruined city of Narvik in a fierce attack as the Germans retreated along the iron ore railroad to Sweden, destroying everything of military value.

Swedish newsspaper correspondents at the border declared the Germans were concentrating their defenses near the frontier as Allied and Norwegian troops, aided by gunfire from British destroyers, took over some points in the city and along Narvik Fjord.

[Norwegian troops have captured the town of Kopperfjell, 20 miles northeast of Narvik, according to wireless reports reaching the Norwegian Legation in Washington.]

Bomb Falls Near U. S. Ship in China

Chungking, May 28 (AP).—A heavy bomb fell within 100 yards of the United States gunboat Tutuila today as the foreign quarter of the city was severely damaged by a Japanese air attack, in which 300 Chinese civilians were believed to have been killed.

The Tutuila, a river patrol vessel similar to the U. S. S. Panay, sunk by Japanese air bombs December 12, 1937, was not harmed.

Another bomb fell into the Yangtze River near the Standard Oil Co.'s tanks and docks. Others fell in a ring around the Russian embassy, but the only damage was to the Embassy automobile.

French General Gets 6 Months

Paris, May 28 (INS).—Gen. Henri Bodet, 56, of the French army medical corps, was sentenced to six months in prison today following his conviction on a charge of leaving his post in the Sedan sector on May 16 "in the face of the enemy."

Nazi Ship Tries Blockade

Belem, Brazil, May 28 (AP).—The German freighter Koenigsberg, 6,466 tons, sailed today, her commander declaring he believed that if he could get on the high seas he could take his ship with its $800,000 cargo of rubber through the Allied blockade.

The War Today

Allies in Counteroffensive As Belgians Vow to Fight

THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS is drawing to a close, a German victory almost inevitable, while a new Battle of the Somme—and perhaps a new Meuse-Argonne campaign—begins to the south.

SURRENDER OF BELGIUM'S ARMY at dawn yesterday left between 300,000 and 700,000—no one knew for sure—British and French troops trapped between the Scheldt River and the English Channel. These courses were open to them: To fight where they stand; to try to escape through bomb-shattered Dunkerque; to try to cut through the Germans to the south; to surrender. The first means probable annihilation; the second and third are considered virtually impossible; the last is inconceivable, according to Paris and London.

IN THE SOMME VALLEY to the south, France launched what Paris called an "important movement" but which Germans called "isolated attacks." According to Paris reports it was the beginning of the long-awaited counteroffensive. One hundred miles to the east, 30 French divisions were poised for another drive down the Meuse.

BELGIUM'S REFUGEE CABINET repudiated the King's surrender, and in effect deposed him, but Berlin talked of a new lowland kingdom for Leopold and hailed his action as humane, whereas Belgians, French, and to a lesser degree the British, were bitter toward the monarch.

THE GERMANS REPORTED quick gains in the shrinking triangle of Allied troops, predicted early and complete victory, but for the first time acknowledged possibility of heavy German losses.

Italians Praise Belgian King For Yielding

Parachute Corps Recruiting Begins As War Fever Rises

By the Associated Press

Rome (Wednesday), May 29.—Civilians began taking over some posts left by men called to arms today, as the Belgian collapse heightened Italy's war fervor and made active Italian intervention appear to be only a question of days.

Young Fascists served as traffic police, and helmeted women and girls were seen in uniforms astride motorcycles equipped for anti-air raid duties.

Demonstrations in Spain

At the same time the Italian press indicated that any chance the French and British ever had of obtaining continued Italian nonbelligerency by relaxing their blockade probably has been lost.

Spain also returned to Italian headlines with reports of anti-English demonstrations, together with reminders that Spain might see a chance now to recover Gibraltar.

The government also announced volunteers were being recruited into a parachute corps.

An exit visa requirement, clamped on in a surprise move, stopped the departure without permission from Italy or her colonies of citizens of any countries which impose similar restrictions on Italians. That applied to French, British and Egyptians.

Leopold Called Wise

British and French who sought information about the length of time required before they could obtain visas were told that such details were not yet available.

There was no immediate comment from the government on King Leo-

London, May 28.—Britain's air and sea power was poised tonight for a blow which she hopes will save the flower of her expeditionary force from the Nazi grip of death, clamped tighter by Belgian surrender and exposure of the Allies' left wing in Flanders.

Prime Minister Churchill, who warned the House of Commons gravely that "hard and heavy tidings" might be expected from a situation of "gravest peril," kept to himself and his war council the plan for the break.

But in promising a statement "when the result of the intense struggle now going on can be

King 'Lost Patience'

Row With Weygand Preceded Leopold Surrender, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 28.—Belgian negotiators appointed by King Leopold III of the Belgians approached German lines late last night carrying an illuminated white flag to ask for an armistice, the well informed commentary Dienst aus Deutschland said.

The Germans replied that unconditional surrender would be the only terms acceptable, the commentary asserted.

The negotiators then recrossed their lines for instructions and returned several hours later with the word that the terms were accepted. Only five hours passed—from 11 p. m. Monday to 4 a. m. Tuesday—from the time the negotiators first appeared until the Belgian surrender became official.

Reports here said Leopold already had departed for a "well known Belgian castle which was placed at his disposal" by Adolf Hitler, but there was no hint as to its name or location. There was talk, however, that it was located in the Ardennes Forest.

An interesting question raised by the capitulation was the fate of the Belgian colonies. An unverified report circulated in Berlin was that the Belgian government in Paris offered to place the colonies under the protection of France. It was stated here London and Paris were negotiating on this point.

The commentary said a violent quarrel between Leopold and Generalissimo Weygand of the Allied

300,000 Allies Believed Snared; Losses Heavy, Berlin Concedes

By George Axelsson
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 28.—The final chapter of the already historic battle of the Flanders pocket is apparently in the process of being written, as a result of the Belgian capitulation which went into effect at 3 o'clock (G. M. T) Tuesday.

The Germans think the Allies have succeeded in shipping out over 500,000 men from the pocket during the last few days.

Some 20 Allied divisions (300,000 to 360,000 men) are still making a desperate last stand.

German military commentators declared these Allied troops, reported under terrific hammering by German bombers, must "surrender or die" within the next few days.

The cities of Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing tonight are reported to be almost surrounded and their fall, is expected momentarily.

Immediately after the surrender became effective, Belgian troops began laying down their arms, but how to separate the Allied troops on Belgian soil, and similarly the Belgian troops in the French part of the pocket, seems to be a difficult aspect of the surrender.

The Allies in Belgium possibly have had time to withdraw across the border, but if the Belgians in France could or would be "unscrambled" from their Allied comrades in arms, so far remains a mystery.

[Other Berlin dispatches, which did not mention the reported Allied evacuation, placed the trapped Allied armies at as high as 700,000. Similar disagreement existed in regard to the number of Belgians surrendered. French estimates were 250,000 to 300,000; German estimates 400,000 to 500,000. Editor's note.]

For the first time today Germans admitted heavy losses in the Battle of Flanders. The German military spokesman said:

"The combat has during the last few days, grown extraordinarily bitter. At times, the enemy offered furious resistance, so that we must expect corresponding losses also on our side."

6th Nation Taken

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 28.—Adolf Hitler's German forces, swallowed tonight the sixth nation to fall to Nazi arms since the war began, and struck massive new blows through the westward rim of France toward Britain.

King Leopold of Belgium gave up, ordering half a million men to cease fighting, and Allied troops—already encircled in Belgium and northwestern France—were thus left without any protection on what had been their long northern front.

The German high command's reports tonight indicated the British and French in the north have been squeezed into a triangular area approximately 25 miles wide and about 55 miles long around Lille.

At its base on the Channel coast, the triangle is about 50 miles wide, but quickly narrows to about 25 miles and then tapers to a point at St. Armand, less than 20 miles east of Lille in northern France.

The front runs approximately thus:

From just east of Zeebrugge, Belgium, southward 6 miles east of

THE COLONEL VIEWS WITH ALARM

Fortunately, the Capital's near-hysteria has subsided a little. Few here are now really frightened, least of all my old friend the retired colonel, who has reduced his daily ration of bicarbonate of soda to one pill and one teaspoonful a day.

Harlan Miller

"We can straighten our neckties and smooth down our hair now," he said, ordering a double Manhattan. "But we must instill a little 110% old-fashioned patriotism in our young men right away."

"Did you say 110%?" I asked politely, ordering a double tomato juice.

"Yes," he retorted with finality, "I said 110% patriotism and maybe I mean 150%.

"And how do you intend to arrange that?"

• • • •

Formerly the colonel relied heavily on oratory, and was willing to make a speech at the drop of a hat. But his oratory is always studded with his oft repeated "I tell you, men——" and he finds young audiences both cynical and facetious.

"—he'd call on Black Jack"

"I've been doing a little research," he explained.. "I find that up to the first World War, Americans imbibed 110% patriotism naturally from their history books, from their teachers and from the very air they breathed."

"Lots of fresh air is good for children," I allowed.

"Then, after the war," he continued, ignoring the interruption, "along came this fellah H. L. Mencken and made 110% Americanism unfashionable. He caught the post-war generation in its Harold Teen phase, in bell-bottomed pants. He called the patriots 'wowsers' and 'flag-wavers.'"

• • • •

"I remember. No young fellah likes to be called a wowser."

"Well," he went on, "I understand this fellah Mencken is still living over in Baltimore. I call on him to use what pep he has left to revive the faith of young Americans in 200% Americanism."

• • • •

"But the younger generation doesn't wear bell-bottomed pants any more. They wear tapered pants."

"But they're the same breed!" thundered the Colonel. "Frivolous, dilettante, smarty, irresponsible. Convinced that someone else will save 'em from tyranny. Let George do it."

"Maybe Mencken is tired. Or maybe retired."

"They ought to put Black Jack Pershing on a national hook-up every week!" bellowed the colonel, ordering another Manhattan. "He'd teach 'em a few things about patriotism!"

"—he'd teach 'em Paul Bunyan"

"Maybe the young men are too tired to listen."

"They're born tired," he said, a little wearily. "Don't they realize they still have more to stick out their chests about than any dictator's slaves? How many of our boys would volunteer to be parachute troops in defense of our country?"

• • • •

"Quite a few, maybe."

"I don't know," he said, sighing. "Most of them would want to know where they got off. I think Paul Bunyan ought to be required reading in every high school. Teach 'em to be big. But so many teachers seem to be kinda new-fangled pacifists."

• • • •

"That's a harsh accusation."

"I stand by my guns!" he thundered again. "They teach the boys to model in clay and paint watercolors and even how to make salads with marshmallows in 'em. Ugh! Do they teach em to love the flag and hate tyrants and be ready to die for freedom? No, they want to live forever in these playsuits they wear nowadays."

He had me so depressed that I almost forgot to reach for the check.

House Votes $2,200,000,000 For Navy Air Arm, Shipbuilding

Senate Favors U. S. Selling Guns at Cost To Latin America

The House yesterday approved two major parts of the emergency defense program—a $2,200,000,000 expansion of the naval air force and a speed-up plan for warship construction.

The Senate, meanwhile, acted to tighten the defenses of the Western Hemisphere by unanimously passing a resolution permitting other American republics to purhcase arms from the United States at cost.

The naval aviation measure would authorize a force of 10,000 planes and 16,000 pilots for the Navy, nearly half of them manning a chain of air bases to be built in the mid-Pacific, Caribbean, Alaska, Panama and continental United States.

Case Amendment Accepted

Debate on the measure produced a strong hint from Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, that discretionary authority given the Secretary of the Navy to set up additional auxiliary bases might be used to provide additional bases for the defense of the Panama Canal on territory now foreign owned.

Vinson accepted an amendment offered by Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, requiring the Navy to consult with the Secretaries of State and War in locating such bases, and declared it "entirely proper" the Navy should confer with the State Department in the establishment of any bases "outside the United States."

Other defense developments were:

The House Military Affairs Committee approved three measures to round out the emergency preparedness program. They would authorize a $15,000,000 construction program at Army posts, a $3,500,000 enlargement of military reservations and the use of officers of Army ground branches as members of plane combat crews.

Two members of the House, Representatives Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, and Cox (Democrat), Georgia, charged the National Labor Relations Board was hampering the national defense program.

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, and Representative Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, introduced bills calling for military training in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Secretary Woodring defended the Army against Congressional charges of waste in past appropriations, declaring that of the $16,169,000,000 spent during the past 16 years 86 per cent went for fixed charges of upkeep, with only an average of $21,000,000 a year being spent on arms and equipment for the ground arms.

Senate and House conferees on legislation to "vitalize" the Army by retiring officers over 60 years reached an agreement and prepared to report. They decided to eliminate a Senate amendment delaying the retirement of the older officers who do not hold command posts.

Passage of the bill to speed shipbuilding was by a 400-to-1 vote, with the tally on the air-expansion measure 402 to 1. Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), New York, was the lone objector each time.

The speed-up legislation would: Permit the Navy to negotiate contracts instead of calling for competitive bids on ships, planes or materials; advance up to 30 per cent of the contract price to aid new companies; raise the exemption of the law limiting profits from $10,000 to $25,000; permit the Navy instead of the Treasury to determine what part of additional facilities can be charged against orders; extend the work-week from 40 to 48 hours; grant overtime pay and double pay for employes working during vacations; and call back retired employes.

Walsh-Healy Clause Beaten

To guard against "fifth-column" activity among naval employes, the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to dismiss any person without regard to civil service rules.

Efforts were made from the floor to apply the Walsh-Healy Act to contracts negotiated under the bill, but this was shouted down by the House. Another proposal to make the National Labor Relations Act inapplicable to any firms taking Navy orders was also defeated.

The aviation bill would authorize $124,132,000 for immediate construction of 19 air bases, plus an additional $20,000,000 for reserve and auxiliary fields. All but three of the bases now have some facilities, the new ones being at Unalaska in the Aleutian Islands, Wake Island, and Quonset Point, R. I.

Under the bill permitting Latin-American nations to buy arms here at cost, the War and Navy Departments would be empowered to build ships, weapons or military equipment in Navy yards and arsenals or "otherwise procure" such equipment. Plans and specifications could also be furnished the other American republics under the bill.

Already passed by the House, the measure goes back for approval of an amendment assuring that any such orders will not interfere with our own armament program.

War Sentiment in U. S. Rises Since Nazi Invasion But Remains 13 to 1 Against Entry

By Dr. George Gallup,

Princeton, N. J., May 28.—Sentiment for going to war with Germany has increased since the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium May 9, but the increase has been less than four per cent. A nation-wide survey just completed finds the country still more than 13 to 1 against American entrance into the conflict.

GALLUP

For many months studies by the American Institute of Public Opinion have found two basic aims governing the attitude of the American people toward the war—first, to do everything possible to aid the Allies, but, second, to stay out of the war. The events of recent weeks have caused increased sentiment for helping the Allies by every means "short of war," but there has been little change in the other basic attitude—to keep out of the fighting.

Trend of Sentiment

The trend of sentiment on going to war with Germany has been as follows:

"Do you think the United States should declare war on Germany and send our Army and Navy abroad to fight?"

	Yes	No
When war started (Sept. 1939)	6.0%	94.0%
October	5.0	95.0
December	3.5	96.5
After invasion of Norway (April 1940)	3.7	96.3
Today (since invasion of Holland, Belgium and France)	7.0	93.0

It is interesting to note the relation between events in the war and the trend of sentiment. Some observers thought the Nazi invasion of Norway with its bombing of open towns would profoundly affect America's attitude of aloofness. Actually, according to the survey, there was little change.

The dramatic and world-shaking invasion of Holland and Belgium a week later brought a net increase of about 3 per cent in war sentiment. But it is clear that, for the present at least, no war fever of any appreciable size has been generated. What will happen to American sentiment if the Nazis unleash a furious bombing assault against England, or threaten Canada, remains to be seen.

U. S. Not Apathetic

The comparative absence of warlike sentiment does not mean, however, that the Nation looks with indifference on what is transpiring abroad.

Public opinion surveys have consistently shown that national sympathy is overwhelmingly with the British and French, and that feeling against Hitler and the Nazi regime has been mounting since the invasion of Austria in 1938. When war broke out last autumn a survey found the voters in favor of lifting the American arms embargo in order to help England and France.

In a more recent survey a large majority said they would prefer to vote for a candidate who promised the Allies all the help they need short of going to war than to vote for a candidate who promised no more help than is now being given. A small majority likewise favor sending warplanes to the Allies on credit if they cannot pay cash.

Willkie Urges U. S. Question Allies on Needs

Favors Open Query Concerning Kind Of Aid They Require

Copyright by New York Times

Akron, Ohio, May 28.—Wendell L. Willkie, utilities executive, in an address before the American Legion tonight, called upon Secretary of State Hull to ask the Allies, "publicly and openly, in the name of the American people," what help, short of an expeditionary force, the United States can render in the conduct of the war.

Speaking before Summit Post, No. 19, of which he served for two years as commander, Willkie pointed out that all progress of assistance to the democracies outlined so far rest, in appearance, on assumptions regarding their needs.

"Our First Line of Defense"

Characterizing Britain and France as "our first line of defense against Hitler," which the United States must strengthen by all means short of war, he urged the Nation to be "practical" in affording them help.

"Our Government has been slow in getting help to them," he said. "One reason for this is that we are industrially unprepared. But another is that no one seems quite clear as to what we should do. If I were in need and you wanted to help me, what would be your first act? Would you sit down and think up ideas of your own? Or would you ask me in what way you could help me most?

"Now perhaps through the ordinary channels of diplomacy our Government has asked the Allies this question. But if it has, we, the people, haven't heard about it, and we certainly don't know the answer.

Urges Open Question

"We assume that the Allies want planes—but maybe they also want butter. We don't know whether it would really help them much to repeal the Johnson Act, or whether it would help them to give up some of our military secrets."

An open question, put by the Secretary of State, he said, if followed by a request from the Allies, would provide the people of the United States with a specific issue to debate on its merits, "nonpartisanly, and nonpolitically, as a unified people."

"Even if we find that we cannot grant it," Willkie asserted, "our public inquiry will have helped Allied morale, will have helped a little to check Hitler."

Roosevelt Names Defense Board

nitely on part time, Henderson will set up a statistitical office in addition to his other duties, and Miss Elliott, if her college approves her acceptance of the appointment, will set up a somewhat similar establishment.

The President said no chairman was being designated, but William H. McReynolds, one of the executive assistants to the President, will serve as secretary.

Authority for naming the commission exists in the National Defense Act of 1917, which provides, as well, for a National Defense Council composed of six members of the Cabinet.

Commission's Duties

Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday, however, that for the present the Defense Council could be forgotten, indicating that the commission would work directly under the President.

It was made clear that in carrying out the defense expansion program, the Army and Navy, after consulting with the commission, will place their own orders, and it will then be the commission's duty to see that materials are supplied to the proper plants, that production schedules are maintained, that transportation is available, that labor is on hand and that any tendency toward what the President calls price spirals is promptly reported and that consumers may be protected against undue cost-of-living increases.

To reporters Mr. Roosevelt made these general observations regarding the defense program:

The situation today is essentially very different from that in 1917, when the Nation was attempting to form and equip an army of 4,000,000 men.

The present situation, he continued, consists of superimposing defense outlays of about $1,250,000,000 on the previously planned expenditures of about $2,000,000,000. There is no talk now of drafting men, women and money. Speed of the World War days was necessarily infinitely greater, the President observed, since we are not now attempting complete mobilization.

Approval Seen for $600,000,000 Arms Taxes, Debt Rise and Issuance of 'Defense Obligations'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Administration leaders yesterday projected a three-point special defense tax program for passage through Congress this session.

Agreement was reached on a $600,000,000 to $700,000,000 total of new levies to be earmarked for defense, a $3,000,000,000 increase in the national debt limit and issuance of the same amount of "national defense obligations," to be amortized in five years by the taxes.

After the President's approval, meetings of both the Senate Finance and the House Ways and Means Committees were called for this morning to rush action. Expedition was the watchword and leaders envisioned passage within a month, possibly without hearings.

Ten Per Cent Supertax Studied

The following sources of "quick" new revenue, not touching the basic tax structure, were being carefully combed over by the experts:

A 10 per cent "supertax" on 1940 individual and corporate income, to raise about $210,000,000.

A similar 10 per cent increase in excise taxes, to raise approximately $160,000,000.

An increase in the Federal tax on gasoline from 1 cent to 2 cents a gallon, to raise another $200,000,000.

An increase in the tax on beer from $5 to $6 a barrel, to produce $75,000,000.

An upping of the tax on liquor from $2.25 to $3 a gallon, to yield about $75,000,000.

Byrd Asks Salary Cuts

The above items, known to have figured in yesterday's discussions, would yield a grand total of $720,000,000, but it was pointed out that no detailed decisions have been reached and the entire program with many changes will have to be worked out by committees.

Other emergency tax suggestions that poured in from all sources ranged from a 10 per cent increase in all taxes to yield $800,000,000 to non-Administration proposals for a manufacturers' excise levy to return $800,000,000.

Increase in the present tax on cigarettes from $3 to $3.50 per 1,000, to yield $70,000,000, was also proposed.

President Roosevelt himself favors a flat 10 per cent increase in all taxes, a procedure employed when he was Governor of New York.

Special capital or industrial profits imposts were expected to encounter Administration opposition.

A counter-proposal advanced by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, called for a 10 per cent horizontal reduction in Federal spending, including Congressional salaries but excluding national defense and debt interest. Byrd proposed to couple this with 10 per cent horizontal increases in 1939 income taxes and in all other internal revenue levies.

Fiscal Experts Confer

After the agreement on the board outlines of the $3,000,000,000, five-year defense tax program at a Treasury conference attended by Administration fiscal experts and Congressional taxmakers, Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, a prime mover in the emergency tax effort, told the Senate:

"There never has been a moment since this emergency arose when the Congress, in my opinion, was not ready to respond to meet every emergency occasioned by increased national defense. I belief it will go the limit."

Harrison, who with Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, has been sounding out colleagues for days, was assured of general Republican support by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigna, "although there may be some sharp disagreement over details."

Ffinances Called "Sixth Column"

Just before Harrison's Senate announcement of the Administration tax purposes, Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, in a speech from the floor, had called for revenue action now. Tydings termed the present condition of Government finances a "sixth column" that might undermine National security.

In conference all morning with Secretary Morgenthau were Harrison, Doughton, Representative Cooper, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Ways and Means tax subcommittees; Undersecretary of the Treasurer Daniel W. Bell, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan, Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, and Colin F. Stam, tax expert of the Joint Congressional Committee on internal revenue.

Doughton, like Harrison, sought the cooperation of the Republican minority. He obtained from Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority committeeman, a pledge that Republicans will go into today's meeting with open minds.

Decision to proceed at once followed Treasury disclosure that under the added defense burden the borderline of the national debt limit will be reached around the first of the year.

Byrd urged a dual fiscal approach to defense financing that would improve the Treasury's finances fiscal position by $1,000,000,000 by raising taxes and cutting expenses and involve no increase in the debt limit.

He asked that a 10 per cent cut in spending be made a simple rider on an appropriation bill, and called for appointment of a commission composed of three Senators, three House members and three businessmen to find ways and means of curtailing wasteful spending and devising a sound tax structure when the next Congress assembles.

Air Forum Speakers Warn U. S. Against Being Too Optimistic

Future Defense Might Face Ruin, Authorities Say

While 36 Army planes roared overhead, speakers at the National Aviation Forum in the Commerce Auditorium yesterday warned that past neglect and present overoptimism may bring future air defense to disaster.

Reaching through the window to their conference room was the sound of a symphony of power being played above the city; 18 bombardment planes and 18 pursuit planes winging across the sky in constantly shifting formations.

From Fairfield, Ohio, came twin-motored Douglases of the Ninth Bombardment Group, pausing briefly on their way home to Mitchel Field, Long Island, from maneuvers at Shreveport, La. Led by Lieut. Col. R. F. Cole, they carried 54 officers and 54 men.

They were met over Frederick, Md., by 18 single-seaters of the Eighth Pursuit Group of Langley Field, Va., commanded by Maj. R. C. Moffatt, which led them into Washington. The fighters flew on home in Langley, while the bombers dropped down on Bolling Field, refueled and took off for Mitchel.

Sixth Column of Quibblers

In the auditorium, Devon Francis, aviation editor of the Associated Press, told his audience of aviation experts that a "sixth column" had retarded until recently formulation of a definite air program in the United States. He charged "indifference, quibbling and fumbling" in the past and said only the pressure of an emergency now has led to "a gigantic and expensive program to mend our national defense deficiencies."

"The sixth column," he said, "has given us brave and misleading stories about our air defense establishment. . . . Even now, with the burden of air rearmament suddenly thrust upon us, we are being careless of the facts.

"We assure our people that airplane productivity is only a matter of applying ourselves to our task, and yet we know that in 1941 we can produce probably a mere 15,000 military airplanes, less than half the number now being made by the leading air power of the world. That is next year, not this year. We talk of 50,000 civilian pilots in training during the 12 months starting July 1, and we know that we had trouble finding 10,000 interested in taking the training during the college year now ending."

The United States already is repeating its major mistake of World War days, said Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, in building up too great a number of organizations involved in national defense.

"The public," he added, "must not be fooled by impossible statements concerning our production capacity today."

CAA Inconsistency Charged

He explained that under President Roosevelt's reorganization plan, the Civil Aeronautics Act "deliberately had been divested of any war powers." The new setup, he said, contains "vital inconsistencies" and the new Civil Aeronautics Board under the Commerce Department must work "almost perfectly" if it is to better the record of the abandoned Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Grover C. Loening, pioneer aircraft builder, said the success of the Germans in landing troops from the air in Norway and Holland "changed warfare in its very fundamentals." He declared America must develop cargo carrying by air as a defense measure, for "in this and this alone we are pathetically behind."

Caustic criticism of the President's plan to train 50,000 pilots under the CAA came from Robert Dawson, United Airlines pilot with 14,000 hours flying time, who suggested a plan of his own of training by the Nation's 1,500 airline pilots in their spare time. As far as producing 50,000 planes, as the President suggested, is concerned, "I have difficulty even imagining 50,000 warplanes."

Speed Advance Dangerous

The jump for pilots trained on flivver planes—"little pink airplanes with polka dots"—to military craft flying 400 miles an hour is, he reminded his audience, a considerable one. "Could I get into a 400-mile-an-hour airplane immediately myself?" he asked. "I could and would not because I would kill myself."

His own pilot training plan, he declared, had two drawbacks—"its simplicity and its economy"—that might prevent its favorable reception in official Washington. He proposed the Government furnish a "real airplane that goes places" and the airline pilots form flying clubs to give instruction on their days off. Mechanics could be trained in the same fashion, he said, by airline mechanics.

The four-day conference and air meet will be closed tonight with a banquet at the Willard Hotel. Postmaster General Farley and Al Williams, former Navy pilot, will speak. Today will be National Defense Day, with emphasis on the Nation's defense by air.

Senate Protects The Bald Eagle

Noting that the bald eagle is "a symbol of American ideals of freedom" and yet is threatened with extinction, the Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill protecting the Nation's No. 1 bird.

The bill provides a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment for anyone killing or even shooting at bald eagles, and also for anyone who possesses or ships one killed after passage of the measure.

The only exception is that the Secretary of Interior may issue permits allowing the killing of bald eagles for museums or scientific purposes or for the protection of wildlife or agricultural interests.

Johnson Lays Defense Lapse To Republicans

Hoover Is Chided For His Prediction Of Allied Victory

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson, replying last night to former President Hoover's national defense address of Monday, charged Republicans with neglect of the Nation's armament before President Roosevelt took office.

He declared the Administration would carry out the present program "free from politics and partisanship."

Johnson said his speech over the N. B. C. chain was a rebuttal to what he termed Hoover's "reply" to President Roosevelt's Sunday night fireside chat.

Contrasts Administrations

Contrasting United States defenses at the end of the Hoover Administration with those of the Roosevelt regime, Johnson declared "our responsible leaders" from 1922 to 1933 "did nothing to awaken America to its dangers."

"They offered no concrete program to strengthen our national defense," he said. "Far worse, they kept right on reducing our Army and weakening our Navy, and pointing with pride to their saving of a few pennies here and there. At the direct order of President Hoover the Marine Corps became but a shadow of defense. Saving, indeed, at the expense of national insurance!"

When the Democratic Party returned to power in 1932, Johnson added, "at once the picture changed. . . . We are building a Navy that should prove second to none. . . . Under President Roosevelt, our Army gained a new lease on life. It began to modernize, to motorize and to mechanize."

Hoover Prediction Recalled

Johnson recalled a newspaper interview last October in which he said Hoover predicted that the Allies could not be beaten, regardless of German air and submarine power, and that at the worst the war could end only in a stalemate.

This attitude, Johnson continued, seemed "curiously unreal" in the face of present facts. The very tone of the interview, the Assistant Secretary said, encouraged Americans to believe that this Nation was in no way concerned with the trouble abroad. This, together with Hoover's declared principles of neutrality—including prohibition of any but defensive arms to belligerents—seemed hardly reconcilible with the present Hoover outlook, as outlined in Monday's speech, Johnson said.

Emphasizing that this Nation lived up to disarmament pacts, under Republican administrations, at the same time that it was evident that the other nations were not, Johnson praised the advances made under the New Deal.

"It is time to quit talking politics," he said. "There is work ahead. The air has been cleared. Let us get down to business and get our defense in shape. The Roosevelt Administration will carry out our National defense program free from politics and partisanship and only in the interests of national security. We will take every worthwhile suggestion from every responsible person which will help toward the realization of this objective. We have one supreme goal—the safety of the United States and the security of the American people, which united we shall achieve—in the minimum of time."

2 Blimps First Ships to Land On Airport at Gravelly Point

First aircraft to land on what soon will become the Washington National Airport, two blimps yesterday floated down to the Gravelly Point mudflats to dedicate "the world's largest paving contract"—the laying of 677,000 square yards of asphalt-concrete runways—equal to a four-lane highway from the Capital to Baltimore.

Following the ceremonies, the two Goodyear blimps, Enterprise and Rainbow, joined four naval airships in a jaunty parade over the city as an aerial tribute to the National Aviation Forum being held here this week.

The initial landing, at 10:42 a. m., was made by the Washington-stationed Enterprise, piloted by Commander Karl Lange, which dropped on the intersection of the two longest runways on the field, approximately 6,855 and 5,210 feet long. A dash of extra excitement was given the occasion when a gust of wind bucked the blimp sideways, scattering a welcoming party of 50 spectators and officials.

Eight minutes later the Rainbow, which breezed into Washington from its base in Akron, Ohio, gently nosed to the field.

The ceremonies were brief. Official greetings were expressed by Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the airport's engineering commission. Participating in the flights and exercises were John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator; Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce; Harllee Branch, Civil Aeronautics Authority member; Maj. Gen. Julian Schley, chief of Army Engineers; Thomas Beck, chairman of the National Aviation Forum.

A small bronze plaque was imbedded in the runaways' intersection to mark the beginning of the paving, which was started yesterday under a $212,000 contract let to the Warren Bros. Road Co., of Boston.

Just before noon the blimps joined the larger naval airships, which came from Lakehurst, N. J., in a swing around the Capital, the squadron dipping over Bolling Field, where scores of planes were lined up in formation for the aviation forum exhibition. After an hour of touring, the naval blimps and the Rainbow left for New Jersey airports.

Mrs. Reynolds Gives Objectives To Sibley Nurses

In a world of chaos, confusion and uncertainty, one needs to obey the laws of life and of the universe to minister to humanity, Sibley Hospital graduates were told last night by Mrs. F. C. Reynolds.

Official of the board of trustees of the Methodist Woman's Home Missionary Society, she gave the commencement address in services at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, on American University campus.

Dr. John M. Orem, acting president of Sibley Hospital, presented the diplomas and nurses' pins; greetings came from Mrs. Robert Stewart, Methodist missionary official; Dr. Paul E. Cromelin, president of the Sibley board of directors, and Dr. Thomas Mattingly, of the Sibley medical council.

The nurses recited the Florence Nightingale pledge. Dr. William A. Keese, host pastor, gave the invocation.

Presbyterians Act On War Objectors

Rochester, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America approved today a proposal permitting conscientious objectors to war to file their positions with their respective State church assembly clerks.

The assembly referred to the committee on bills a motion to petition the President and Congress to "lend the Nation's moral and economic weight against the aggressor in the present conflict."

Connolly, Screen Star, Dies at 52

WALTER CONNOLLY

Wife and Daughter Asleep in Next Rooms; Heart Attack Blamed

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, May 28.—Walter Connolly, 52, motion picture actor whose screen specialty was a sort of lovable querulousness, died today.

A nurse who had gone for his breakfast found his body on the floor upon her return. Physicians said he apparently suffered a heart attack.

The widow, the former stage actress Nedda Harrigan, and their 15-year-old daughter, Anne, were asleep in adjoining rooms.

Private services will be held in Beverly Hills. Interment will be at Cincinnati after Miss Connolly's school term ends, two weeks hence.

Connolly was born at Cincinnati in 1888 and attended St. Xavier College there and the University of Dublin in Ireland. From an acting debut at Norfolk, Va., in 1909, he went to a long career on Broadway before signing a motion picture contract in 1932.

Among more than a score of pictures in which he appeared were "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen," "Washington Merry-Go-Round," "It Happened One Night," "First Lady" and "Fifth Avenue Girl." Most recently he played the title role in "The Great Victor Herbert.'

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Winifred Howell Artaud gives a piano recital Tuesday night in the Arts Club. Program: Chaconne (Bach-Busoni), Arabesques in E and G, Ballade Slave, Reverie (Debussy) Etudes in E major, C sharp minor and F minor (Chopin), Etudes Symphoniques (Schumann).

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening a capably played piano recital by Winifred Howell Artaud. While her program held nothing recondite, save possibly the rarely heard "Ballade Slave," of Debussy, her readings of familiar compositions were informed by a musicianship both instinctive and cultivated. Her technique was thoroughly disciplined and at the service of an interpreter versed in intelligent and sensitive phrasing. Her playing had an appeal to the mind as well as to the emotions of her auditors.

BROWN

The discipline of her resources was immediately evident in her performance of the Bach chaconne in the version by Ferruccio Busoni. She did not make it the vehicle for a display of ponderous dynamics or scintillant bravura, but handled it with a restraint respectful of its musical integrity. The proportions of the structure were finely preserved, and her exposition of the content was clearly and cleanly phrased.

Her feeling for the style of Debussy was disclosed in her treatment of four pieces by that evasive composer. Debussy's meaning is not to be pounced upon, but must be trailed in devious ways and caught unawares. Mrs. Artaud understands this necessity for subtle approach, and puts her knowledge to excellent use.

The remainder of her program was concerned with three etudes by Chopin and the "Etudes Symphoniques" by which Schumann sought to wrest orchestral sonorities from the piano. Her appreciation of Chopin's morbidness was manifest, as was her recognition of Schumann's cyclothmic temperament.

Kurt Hetzel conducts the Washington Civic Orchestra Tuesday night in Central High School auditorium. Soloist: Elizabeth Cates. Program: Prelude, Chorale and Fugue (Bach-Abert), "Valse Triste" (Sibelius), Overture to "Coriolanus" (Beethoven), Piano Concerto in B flat minor (Chaikovski).

What individual honors awaited a recipient last evening at the concert of the Washington Civic Orchestra in Central High School were rightly assigned by a friendly and demonstrative audience to Elizabeth Cates for her assured and forthright performance in Chaikovski's B flat minor piano concerto. Her confidence more than once outstripped that of the orchestra, and her technical surety was unfaltering.

The concerto demands dynamic resources that Miss Cates supplied readily and alertly. She has an excellent command of power and fleetness, and there was no hesitancy in her application of these qualities. While one might have wished for more romantic impulse in her reading, it did not lack dash, impetuosity or vigor. Her phrasing was clear and precise, and her tone had resonance and color.

Dr. Kurt Hetzel had arranged his program in a way that gave Miss Cates the place of prominence. The concerto was preceded by Abert's arrangement of a Bach prelude, chorale and fugue; the popular "Valse Triste" of Sibelius, and Beethoven's dramatic overture to Collin's "Coriolanus." The orchestra played with the zest that is its characteristic trait, and the audience gave hearty approval.

The Federal Diary:

USHA Ready to Meet Defense Need

By Edward Ryan

Officials of the United States Housing Authority said yesterday their agency is "geared for anything" in an expanded defense program.

So far no official steps have been taken with the agency as a result of the President's suggestion last week that their organization might be called on to direct housing expansion needed to accompany industrial expansion.

While such moves would await legislation broadening the authority of USHA, it was pointed out, officials have no qualms about their ability to handle any project that might come their way in the national defense program.

The agency's equipment for this work was outlined as Nathan Straus, housing administrator, in a speech prepared for a Utica audience, said that the present USHA program is contributing to national defense.

"People constitute the very basis of national defense," said Straus. "The mechanical engines of war can serve no purpose unless they are backed by men and women determined to protect their homes and able, because of strong bodies and sound minds, effectively to carry out that determination.

"We need factories to build machines of defense. We need good homes to build human beings, sound in character and strong in body. They are the first line and the last line in the defense of the Nation."

Straus made clear that he was speaking in terms of the present slum clearance program.

The Autnority has been building up for about seven years, now numbers 1,500 employes, draftsmen, architects, lawyers, land appraisers, managers. Many started with the old housing division in the Interior Department, which directed construction of 25,000 dwelling units. Another 10,000 have been completed under the new program, and 80,000 are under construction.

Deputy commissioners of several Interior Department bureaus were given a boost toward Civil Service status yesterday.

The House Civil Service Committee voted to report favorably a bill backed by Secretary Ickes which would bring into the classified civil service the deputy commissioner positions in the Office of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Fisheries, Biological Survey and Land Office.

The committee also approved these measures:

A bill to permit Oriental language interpreters employed in the Government to share in the retirement system. There are about 25 of these employes in the service, it was estimated, with records running from 3 to 40 years.

A bill to give Spanish-American war veterans working for the Government credit under the civilian retirement system for all military service over 90 days. The 90-day period entitles them to a veterans' pension, while those who served longer now receive no extra credit, either for more pension or for employe retirement benefits.

A bill to bring all employes of the Alaskan Railroad service under the Alaskan Railroad Retirement Act. Some employes of the agency are covered by the separate Civil Service Retirement Act.

Eyewitness Tells of Tommies' Bravery In Desperate Withdrawal From Boulogne

Destroyers Battle Artillery and Tanks At Point-Blank Range

By W. F. Leysmith

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 28.—The escape of British troops from Boulogne in destroyers whose bottoms scraped the mud in shallow water, while German tanks rumbled down the hillside onto the foreshore, fieldguns fired at point blank range and dynamited cranes crashed to the wharves, was described today by a naval eyewitness.

The number of casualties was not mentioned but the eyewitness said the troops, who had been taking shelter in a railway station, embarked with "bits of roof flying around" as the destroyers—one afire and the others heavily listing under the weight of troops—backed out of the harbor under the very noses of German bombers.

Destroyers Shell Tanks

The eyewitness, who apparently was a member of a naval demolition party rushed out from England on two hours' notice, said the British and French destroyers were shelling German tanks approaching Boulogne from hills to the south when his vessel reached the jetty. Small parties of Germans already were coming down the streets of the outskirts of the town.

By the time the naval party destroyed the crane, powerhouse and dock pumping station some German gunners who commanded the high ground, were within 400 yards of the docks, and some snipers within 50 yards. As the last Tommy crossed the bridge the order for complete demolition was given.

The floating dock was sunk, machinery and power houses blown up, and the hinges of some dock gates demolished—trawlers, cranes, anything and everything that might be useful to the Germans. The account of the eyewitness continues:

"Two listing destroyers steamed stern first from the narrow entrance, with all the troops they could cram aboard. Then three destroyers came in alongside, to be immediately fired on by German field guns concealed in the wooded hill and a number of pomposms and machine guns firing from second-story windows of a hotel near the dock. The range was not more than 800 yards. Then several heavy German tanks came down the hill onto the foreshore.

German Guns Silenced

"Now the destroyers' 4.7's, 4-inchers and pomposms opened fire, plastering the German field guns at point-blank range and blasting the hotel opposite until the German machine guns were silenced in a shower of hurtling masonry and shell fragments.

"The first shot at the German tanks missed, but the second was a direct hit that caused one to capsize and go spinning over and over like a child doing a cartwheel. A third was knocked out by a direct hit and the others retired."

The accurate and rapid fire of these destroyers and the bravery of the men manning the guns in the open, the eyewitness suggests, probably saved the embarking troops.

As darkness fell the railway station was still crammed with troops and around 11 p. m. another destroyer entered the darkened harbor. It was bombed and shelled as it approached but it took off a full load. Then two more destroyers arrived, evacuating the remainder and the many wounded. The eyewitness adds that it was a miracle they were not sunk.

Fury of the Allied armies was primed last night for what may be the beginning of the decisive battle of the war. Map pictures the battlefield as a result of the capitulation of the Belgians. (1) Narrow pocket where the British forces are trapped. Reports said the bottleneck was narrowed to 6 miles near Labassee. Meanwhile, the trapped British redoubled efforts to fight southward to the Somme. Channel ports of Ostend and Dunkerque were apparently still open for flight to England. (2) French began attacking on the Somme front in a desperate fight to relieve the armies caught in the pocket. (3) Full might of the Allied forces, estimated at 650,000 men, was poised to smash the Nazis along the Aisne River to force withdrawal to the north. Bill Bars Alien Crew on U. S. Ships

A bill that would require all officers, pilots and crew members of American vessels to be citizens of the United States was introduced in the House yesterday as Congress tightened legislation to thwart possible "fifth column" activities.

The measure was sponsored by Chairman Schuyler Otis Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, of the House Merchant Marine Committee. It exempts vessels not in commercial service and permits the Secretary of Commerce to make certain exemptions where citizens are not available for employment and for fishing vessels.

his forces. The Belgian government in France, therefore, has control over only the great mass of its refugees, mostly women and children, and but little fighting manpower.

Belgian Premier Pierlot, broadcasting over the French radio, said:

"The King, exceeding the constitution, has entered into separate negotiations with the enemy and has treated with them. Belgium is dumbfounded. But the guilt of one man cannot be imputed to the entire nation.

"Our army has not deserved the fate which is before it. The act, which we deplore, is without legal validity and does not bind the country. According to the Belgian constitution . . . all powers come from the people . . .

Freed From Allegiance

"The King has broken the constitution and placed himself under the power of the invader. Consequently he is no longer able to govern . . .

"Officials, state leaders and officers are, therefore, relieved from the allegiance imposed on them by their oath of security. Among the brave young Belgians who have responded to the appeal of the government in France and Great Britain, a new army will be organized."

Belgian Envoy To Carry on Here

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, Belgium's Ambassador to the United States, will carry on in Washington as the envoy of the refugee government in Paris which has deprived King Leopold III of his throne.

The tall, aristocratic diplomat, whose grandfather was aide de camp to Leopold II, so informed the State Department at 3 p. m. yesterday.

Count van der Straten, who came here in 1934 to take over the embassy at 1780 Massachusetts avenue northwest, gave out two statements as he emerged, pale and somber-visaged, from the office of Adolf Berle, Assistant Secretary of State. One had to do with the plight of the Belgian army, and the other with the situation growing out of King Leopold's surrender.

He was asked if the second statement meant he had aligned himself with Premier Pierlot, who a few hours before had announced that all Belgian officials had been released from their oath of allegiance to King Leopold and that the monarch had been repudiated.

"Yes," said Count van der Straten, "most emphatically."

His formal statement said:

"The Belgian Embassy has received confirmation of the declaration of the Belgian prime minister, M. Pierlot, affirming that the capitulation of the Belgian army, signed by the King, was contrary to the views of the Belgian government, which is determined to carry on the fight against the aggressor.

Germans Admit Heavy Losses as Belgium Falls

Bruges and Torout to just east of Roselare; then sharply west close to Ypres, eastward again to Menin, then south just east of Tourcoing and Roubaix to St. Amand and the Scheldt Canal.

On to Channel

From there the line passes over Orchhies, Labassee, Merville, Hazebrouck, Bourbourg and to the Channel coast immediately east of Gravelines.

The southern front begins at the mouth of the Somme and extends eastward over Abbeville, Amiens, Peronne and Ham; southward between Lafere and Chauny to the Oise River and the Aisne Canal, followin gthe latter to the junction with the Aisne River.

The front then follows the Aisne over Rethel to Amagne, then due east to Lechesne, Stenay, Montmedy and Longwy to the Luxembourg border.

On the southern front, in the region of the Somme, the French were reported thrown back in "isolated attacks."

The surrender ordered by Leopold opened at least Ostend, on the English Channel, and perhaps Dunkerque very soon.

Thus the Germans were given formidable new sea frontage from which to stab at Britain's North Sea and Channel commerce and naval communications, as well as freedom to concentrate all their northern divisions on the entrapped British and French for a last cleanup before turning southward again to engage the main French army.

Leopold's act to Germans appeared dictated by circumstances.

Adolf Hitler was described as "profoundly stirred" by Leopold's course, and it appeared likely that, with a complete German victory, the King would be permitted somehow to continue functioning as such.

It was believed his army would be treated as were the Norwegians. They were freed to return to their homes upon giving assurances that they would not again fight the Reich.

New Hands to Work

Such a course would have this double value: It would unburden Germany and put new hands to work where needed.

The Germans branded Reynaud's criticism as "cynical, swinish, dastardly, perfidious in the highest degree." In the same breath they acknowledged that the Belgians had fought furiously to the last under a King who was willing to go to the front with his men.

He smelled powder, the Nazis declared, in contrast to the Belgian politicians who opposed his act of surrender.

Turning on the British, an authorized spokesman asked:

"What did you do at Andalsnes and Namsos?" referring to the British withdrawal from those Norwegian ports under German fire, leaving many Norwegians embittered.

Speedboats Busy

Looking to future progress the Germans pointed out that Belgium capitulated and the Polish campaign was completed in 18 days each.

Already, it was declared, the Nazis' mosquito fleet of speedboats was in the English Channel sinking ships 10 to 100 times their size while shore guns were in place to threaten a direct long-range bombardment of England.

To the Berlin populace the Belgian capitulation was one of the most cheering events of the war.

Radios played all of Germany's favorite war and marching songs whenever a brief bulletin was broadcast.

Strategists declared that the deep penetration into France had endangered the communications of the Maginot Line itself, while the Germany army could take in a single stride a little thing like the English Channel.

German submarines and speedboat attacks were reported under way against every British effort to extend relief from the sea.

In the streets of Berlin today this chorus of the "Engelland" song echoed:

French Launch Big Somme Offensive

air attacks.

Gen. Maxime Weygand was reported to have thrown the major part of his force into position for the supreme thrust into the lower rim of the German circle even before the Belgians laid down their arms.

The loss of the mass of the Belgian army, which bowed to Hitler after 18 days of blitzkreig had backed them almost up to their western short, was a blow equaled only by the collapse of Gen. Andre Corap's army in the Battle of the Meuse May 15, which permitted the Nazi motorized units to drive across northern France to the English Channel.

Remnants Fight On

The French and British remnants of Gen. Georges Blanchard's northern army carried on the fight in Flanders above the German salient, but the outcome of the war now turned on the central front, below the broadened Nazi corridor, along the Somme and Aisne rivers and down the main Maginot fortifications to the east.

Neutral observers believed that if Gen. Weygand found he had time he would strike in full force within the next 36 hours. The main blow was expected to come midway between Rethel and Montmedy on the Aisne. These sources said he must strike now or lose not only his trapped divisions but risk the shock of a German thrust in the Rethel area, which might cut under the Maginot Line to Rheims and Paris.

[German sources in Switzerland said that when the Belgian line was broken yesterday fresh Nazi reserves were moved immediately into the Sedan sector to block an expected Allied counteroffensive.]

At the moment of the Belgian surrender the Allies still held much of Flanders and the coast on a line south from Belgium through Menin to Douai and west through St. Omer to Calais. Within that pocket they held Dunkerque, but that port and the Belgian ports above it among them Ostend and Zeebrugge, are now shorn of effective defense.

Widen Corridor to 60 Miles

Paris, May 28 (U.P.).—Lille, Armentieres, Calais, Dunkerque, Tourcoing and Roubaix all remained in French hands late today, according to the claims of military spokesmen, but the German push upon them was swift and strong.

Adding to the plight of the Allies in the battle of Flanders, the Germans have succeeded in widening the "Artois gap" of their corridor to the sea to nearly 60 miles.

French Delivered Fort, Says Nazis

Berlin, May 28 (AP).—An assertion that the French fortress of Boulogne, which fell into Nazi hands last Saturday, was delivered up by its French commander under a "petition for capitulation" was made today by the German radio.

The story was attributed to a colonel who commanded the attacking German forces in an interview with a German "radio reporter."

The German colonel was quoted as adding:

". . . Under the constant pressure the (French) commander felt compelled to offer his surrender. The petition for capitulation by the commander . . . was worded as follows:

"'For humanitarian reasons and to protect human lives I have decided to surrender the garrison without resistance. Therefore, I have ordered my troops to cease firing as from 8:30 a. m. on. At any rate, I beg for sufficient time to communicate this to all.'"

Italians Praise Belgian King

pold's surrender of the Belgian army.

However, Virgino Gayda wrote in the Giornale D'Italia that the surrender was "an act of high political and humane wisdom."

There was speculation as to whether Premier Mussolini might have influenced King Leopold's surrender through King Vittorio Emanuele.

The King is the father-in-law of Princess Maria Jose, sister of Leopold and wife of Italian Crown Prince Umberto.

Some observers suggested Italy might be holding off entry into the war to see what effect the Belgian surrender would have on the British and French defense.

Vatican Talk

It was considered likely that Pope Pius XII discussed Italy's imminent action today with Babuscio Rizzo, counselor of the Italian Embassy at the Vatican, in a private talk preliminary to an audience tomorrow when Bernardo Attolico is to present his credentials as the new Ambassador.

Italians privately and in government circles have expressed curiosity recently as to what effect Italian intervention in the war would have in the United States. Expressions of American opinion on the war are being followed closely.

Americans were not included in today's regulations requiring visas to leave the country.

BLENDED 33 TIMES TO MAKE ONE GREAT BEER

Pabst Blue Ribbon

IN EVERY GLASS, YOU GET THE DELICIOUS BLENDING OF 33 SEPARATE BREWS!

• Now you know why every sparkling, foaming glass of Pabst Blue Ribbon is always so good.

It's the blending—of not just two, or five, or ten, but 33 separate brews, from 33 separate kettles.

Each brew is as fine as 96 years of skill, the 28 Pabst scientists, and Pabst ingredients can make it.

But brewing is a natural process, and Nature never yields two brews exactly alike, even when made with the same formula under strict scientific control.

That's why Pabst goes to so much extra work and expense to blend 33 separate brews. As in the finest champagnes, coffee, tobacco, it's expertly balanced blending that gives Blue Ribbon its unvarying goodness.

The result is America's Premium Beer... with a smoothness that is unique, a goodness that never varies.

Nazis to Kill French Fliers To Retaliate for Alleged Cruelties

Goering Announces 5 to 50 Will Die for Each German Killed

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 28.—Captured French airmen henceforth will be clamped in chains immediately, Marshal Goering announced tonight, in retaliation for alleged mistreatment of a lieutenant colonel of the Nazi air force.

A radio report said Goering specified also that "every time the murder of a German flier is reported" five captured French fliers will be shot and that for every report of firing on a Nazi parachuting from a damaged plane 50 enemy prisoners will be shot.

His order exempted the British because so far they have "not given cause for such retaliatory measures."

Moroccan Troops Blamed

The Nazi air chieftain's announcement followed receipt of a report from Squadron Leader Lieut. Col. Lackner, who told of being fired upon by French Moroccan troops as he parachuted to earth from his flaming plane, set upon and beaten and finally being chained.

The officer was said to have been "temporarily a prisoner of war in French hands," and presumably escaped.

He related that he was rescued from the Moroccans by French gendarmes (police) who then put him in chains despite protestations from French officers.

The air chieftain's order followed one yesterday depriving captured Allied officers of "special facilities" and the announcement of the removal of Gen. Henri Giraud, captured French commander, from a castle to a fortress.

Attlee Attacks Nazis

London, May 28 (AP).—Clement Attlee, lord privy seal, told Commons today that the "bombing of hospital ships and machine-gunning of ambulances in France may be taken in conjunction with deliberate attacks by German aircraft on refugees on the roads of Belgium and France as typical of the methods pursued by the German government."

"The British government hold themselves ready," he went on, "to take such action as they consider appropriate, but it is not their intention to exact retribution from the wounded or on women and children."

'Our Efforts Were Futile'

Spaak Relates How Cabinet Begged Leopold Not to Yield

By the United Press

Paris, May 28.—King Leopold III, harried and defiant, decided at 5 a. m. Saturday to surrender his army and his country to Adolf Hitler after a bitter, night-long argument with four leaders of his cabinet.

The first full rays of sunlight were slanting across the old Belgian chateau of Wynondal, near Thourout to the south of Bruges, and the German army was barely 50 miles away driving swiftly nearer when the young King decided to tell his weary troops to give up.

SPAAK

Paul Henri Spaak, former Belgian premier and now foreign minister who was present at the historic clash between the monarch and his ministers, described the drama-laden scene tonight in an interview.

When the ministers left the King, to flee back to France from the approaching Germans, Leopold remained at his chateau awaiting the Nazis with resignation.

He refused to flee to England, Spaak said.

Here is Spaak's story of the cabinet meeting at Wynondal:

"The King's decision was taken at Wynondal castle at 5 a. m. Saturday.

"He invited the cabinet to his residence and told us frankly that latest military reports showed the Belgian army was bearing the brunt of attack and was suffering heavy losses.

"In his opinion, he said, the Belgian army should withdraw from the war.

"We made a last effort to convince the King, to get him to listen to our pleas to quit the army and go either to France or England, leaving the active field command to the Belgian general staff.

"In the face of the King's formal declaration, we told him frankly that we did not share his views on surrender, and we begged him to leave with us immediately. Our efforts were futile, so at 5 p. m. when daylight came we quit the castle and went to Dunkerque."

across the Atlantic, apparently to forestall any conjecture that they might be accompanying the President Roosevelt, now en route to Europe, or the Washington, which the State Department earlier announced was leaving New York Thursday to bring back refugees from the warring countries.

The Washington will visit other European ports to pick up stranded Americans who have been unable to get to Ireland to board the President Roosevelt. The latter is en route to Galway, Ireland, from where she will sail Saturday with hundreds of refugees.

More than 300 Americans are at Bordeaux, another 70 at Lisbon, and hundreds in Italy. Others are probably trying to reach the seaboard from other cities.

World War Destroyers

At Lisbon, the three warships will join the cruiser Trenton and the destroyers Herbert and Dickinson. The Vincennes is a 10,000-ton vessel, mounting nine 8-inch guns, while the Trenton is of 7,050 tons and carries 6-inch batteries. The four destroyers are 1,190-ton craft of World War vintage. Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney commands the detachment.

The Navy announcement, made at 11 p. m., follows:

"The Secretary of the Navy, the Hon. Charles Edison, announced this evening that the U. S. S. Vincennes, the U. S. S. Truxtun and the U. S. S. Simpson are proceeding from the East Coast of the United States to Lisbon, Portugal.

"This detachment is not convoying any merchant vessels, but is proceeding to Libson for the purpose of protection of American interests."

forces preceded the Belgian action. When Weygand failed to prevail upon the King, it said, French Premier Reynaud tried vainly to reach Leopold by telephone in an effort to change his mind.

The Allies tried to satisfy the monarch, it went on, with what the Germans call a "feeble" drive from the south in an effort to relieve the beleaguered troops in Flanders.

Dienst said the Allies were unable to keep their promises, that instead the situation became "catastrophic" and that Leopold lost patience.

The King insisted he had constitutional authority to order cessation of fighting, the commentary went on.

Leopold reached his decision to capitulate Sunday, German sources said, whereupon Weygand was reported to have made another visit to him. On this visit the King was said to have declared French aid inadequate and to have declared the English were moving toward the Channel with the apparent intention of embarking and leaving Belgium to her fate.

Panama Halts Cars Coming From Canal

Precautions Intensified Since Alleged Election Plot Was Uncovered

By the Associated Press

Panama, Panama, May 28.—The government has clamped on rigid control of communications between this republic and the Canal Zone, where leaders of an alleged abortive revolutionary plot are reported in hiding.

Police precautions, intensified since announcement last Sunday that the plot had been uncovered, include the halting of all vehicles coming from the Canal Zone.

Francisco Arias, leader of the opposition party, and several followers were arrested Sunday. Police announced at the same time the discovery of the alleged plot which they said was aimed at interfering with the national elections June 2.

Mario Alfaro, nephew of Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former president of Panama and opposition candidate in the current campaign, also was arrested.

Police said he called for several sacks of rifles, revolvers and ammunition which were reported to have arrived at the Gatun lock railroad station but that he left without them when the station attendant delayed the delivery to make a telephone call. The authorities described as incorrect previous reports that he was found in possession of dynamite and material for the manufacture of bombs.

United States Army officers of the Canal Zone and reliable semi-official Panama sources joined today in denying radio reports that a Tetas River bridge between the Canal Zone and the Army's Rio Hata airport project had been damaged by an explosion in pre-election disorders.

Taft on Defense

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio, will speak on "National defense" over a national radio network tonight. The half-hour speech, to begin at 9:30 p. m., will be carried by station WMAL.

U. S. Can't Close Eyes to War Peril, Says Woodward

New York, May 28 (AP).—Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the Third Naval District, told the Lions Club today, "It would be mere rashness on our part to assume that the general world condition may not produce our embroilment with dramatic suddenness."

"The Navy stands or falls on the ships it has at the time war breaks," he declared. "Today, we are at peace with the world. Nevertheless . . . it would be criminal negligence for us to close our ears to the warning cry of reason and not prepare for any eventuality."

Concerning the cost of maintaining a Navy, Admiral Woodward said:

"Even with the large emergency increases for national defense being authorized by Congress this year—which amount to $3,300,000,000—the pro-rata cost, when spread over a period of three years, will amount to less than $1 per capita per month. This means about 3 cents per capita, or less than one pays for single soda-pop or partial package of cigarettes."

British Sea, Air Forces Aim Blow to Save Army in Flanders

known and measured," Churchill declared the trapped thousands had and would have "the powerful assistance of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force."

Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information, told the nation tonight its army stood in great peril, that it would be necessary to withdraw the B. E. F. from the positions it now occupies, but that it was not a "defeated" army which would be withdrawn.

"Final victory can still be ours . . . We have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it."

Surrender by Leopold III did not mean, Churchill said, an end of Belgian resistance. He said nothing, however, about the military effect

Churchill had an audience with King George VI tonight.

The prime minister is expected to make his next statement on the war situation June 4.

British military sources announced the expeditionary force "is not beaten" and would continue to fight.

Observers agreed any withdrawal would mean heavy losses of men and materials.

Those who expected a British attempt to battle south through the German seaward salient pointed out this would be supported by the French, already pounding at the southern line of the salient.

To escape by sea, th trapped troops would have to guard their withdrawal by heavy rear guard action and grope northwest for whatever Channel ports might yet be open. Once there, evacuation could be successful only under the concentrated protection of Britain's navy and air force. Troop ships would be subjected to heavy bombing.

Chances of Escape Slim

The peril of the B. E. F. has reached a gravity not even exceeded by that of the British disaster at Gallipoli in tne World War.

The chances of extricating the B. E. F. from the Germans' slowly tightening ring of steel has been seriously lessened.

The odyssey of the B. E. F. which was begun with an almost joyous advance into Belgium when the Belgians and Dutch called for aid, now is wound up in a narrow ellipse surrounded by Germans.

After continued withdrawals, the situation which confronted the British army this morning was this:

In company with some French and Belgian troops they held a shelf of land from Maulde to Audenarde (a line running from 10 miles northwest of Valenciennes to 15 miles south of Ghent).

To the south lay Arras and the edge of the gap through which the Germans were pouring infantry and artillery in support of their mechanized columns at the rear of the British forces.

This morning the B. E. F. left flank—with artillery and small antitank guns—was on the defensive from Ypres to the Scarpe River.

Tonight the remainder of this army lies inside a ring of German steel which already is pressing toward the center with scores of darting attacks by mechanized forces, all preparing the way for a general attack aimed not only at victory but at annihilation.

The first B. E. F. withdrawal was forced by the German break through at Sedan.

The second withdrawal was forced by the swiftness of the German drive toward the coast.

Tonight, to all intents and purposes, the B. E. F. was left to fight or die in the war-scarred hills within sight of Britain.

One authoritative London source said "as long as ammunition lasts we may be sure the B. E. F. will continue the fight."

Doggedly, the British sttled themselves at home for attempted invasion or attack from the air.

H. G. Wells, author and historian, urged the war council to give every aid to the force in Flanders and commented:

"If those at home can divert a few bombs—so much the better."

The London Times said "This island does not expect immunity. Its people are braced to take their share."

Children to Be Moved

The government said 8,000 children previously sent out from London would be moved again—this time from small communities along 150 miles of England's east coast. They will be taken inland from parts of Suffolk, Essex, Kent and Norfolk.

Claiming destruction or damage of 22 German planes, an air ministry communique said R. A. F. fighters and bombers "have been doing their utmost" to relieve German pressure on the Allies in northern France.

The announcement said "all of our aircraft returned" from wave after wave of attacks over the fighting line. Meanwhile, bombers blasted again at military objectives in Dusseldorf, Dortmund, Duisberg, Hamburg and Cologne, Germany.

Thirteen British planes were reported missing after other raids at Stavanger and Narvik, Norway.

At the same time, the air arm of the British fleet struck hard blows at German positions on the French and Belgian coasts.

The admiralty announced German bombers sank the naval trawlers Melbourne and Cape Passaro, on which four lives were lost.

Envoy's Daughter Flys Home

ROSEMARY KENNEDY, 21, eldest daughter of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, left London by airplane yesterday for Lisbon, Portugal, to catch a transatlantic plane to America.

Is Move on Britain Next Hitler Aim?

home forces. And the real significance of this lies in the fact that the shift is regarded as a promotion, not demotion, for Gen. Ironside.

THAT HITLER actually intends what he wants his opponents to anticipate is far less certain. By this time experience should have taught that his practice is to do the unexpected.

He surprised a large section of public opinion by his sudden agreement with the despised Bolsheviks. He upset the dope with equal facility when he seized Prague before taking up the Danzig issue. He confounded the experts again when he invaded Scandinavia before attacking the Low Countries. The Fuehrer will be out of character if he actually follows the publicized plan of invading England, the alleged design for which has been so ostentatiously brought to the attention of neutral reporters.

Very likely the threat to England could actually be consummated. If that were not the case little would be gained in advertising the idea. Admiral Yates Stirling, in an article prepared for the United Press this week, points out various serious obstacles to ferrying an army across the 22-mile width of the Straits of Dover. But he does not deny that it could be done. And in London the possibility is now obviously regarded as very real.

It is interesting now to recall that it has often been discussed, notably in a very exciting novel entitled "The Riddle of the Sands," written early this century by the Sinn Fein leader Erskine Childers, who was executed by the British in 1922.

ASIDE FROM the feasibility of the scheme, however, and aside from the inherent improbability that Nazi Germany will follow the course advertised as obvious, there is a deeper reason for anticipating that Great Britain will not be immediately attacked, even if every Channel port in France and Belgium should fall into German hands.

This deeper reason can be found in Hitler's remarkable political testament, "Mein Kampf," to the outline of which he has adhered with a fidelity which makes it unfortunate that the book is not required reading for all newspaper and radio commentators. Only once, and there in detail rather than substance, has the Fuehrer failed to follow the course which he mapped out for Germany while serving his imprisonment in 1924.

The exception, of course, is the present valuable (to Germany) working agreement between the Reich and Soviet Russia. The denunciation of "Jewish bolshevism" as a potential ally of national socialism is unlimited in "Mein Kampf." But it is to be realized that today Stalin is a temporary, and none too happy, accomplice, rather than an ally, of Hitler. Furthermore the characteristics of bolshevism, particularly with respect to Jewish influence therein, have altered a great deal since 1924.

In virtually every other particular the argument of "Mein Kampf" has been steadfastly put into practice by Hitler according to the theory there laid down. And it is this consistency which today makes it so important to recall what the Fuehrer himself has ordained as the essential policy of Germany toward France and Great Britain, respectively.

"FRANCE," he says, in Chapter 13 of Volume II (unexpurgated edition), "is and remains the inexorable enemy of the German people. Whoever ruled or will rule in France, whether Bourbons or Jacobins, Bonapartists or bourgeois democrats, clerical republicans or red Bolsheviks, the final aim of their foreign policy will always be to take possession of the Rhine frontier and to make this river secure for France by keeping Germany disintegrated and dismembered."

By contrast with French policy, which Hitler predicted would "some day turn loose upon that nation all the avenging spirits of a generation," the British in "Mein Kampf" regarded as friendly people, even possible allies. Far from desiring to destroy the British Empire, Hitler wrote that he "would prefer to see India under English rule than under any other."

This liking for England, as long as the policy of London did not interfere with German expansion in Middle Europe, was of course apparent long after the Fuehrer's rise to power. As late as August 25, 1939, he offered, under certain conditions, "to pledge himself personally" for the continued existence of the British Empire, "and to place the power of the German Reich at its disposal."

There is, on the other hand, no valid reason to imagine any change in the viewpoint, set down by Hitler in 1924, that "the everlasting conflict between Germany and France will never be decided as long as it consists merely of a German defense against French aggression."

NOBODY EXCEPT Hitler himself can at the moment define the extent to which nine months of war have altered his earlier attitude toward France and Great Britain.

Toward the latter, which in his opinion forced the war by interfering with Germany's eastward expansion, he undoubtedly feels great bitterness. But it may be doubted whether that bitterness, and the consequent desire to punish England, have fundamentally affected the judgments reached during his contemplative months in prison 16 years ago.

Certainly if France is still deemed by Hitler "the irreconcilable, mortal enemy" of the German people, it is at France rather than Britain that he may be expected to strike a deadly blow if opportunity serves.

To do so would be in accordance with the theory of "Mein Kampf." It would be in accordance with sound military strategy, which would never urge an attack on England with an undefeated enemy concentrated behind the attackers. It would be in accordance with the technique of deception which now endeavors to portray the British Isles as the target of the next Nazi blow.

The course which a triumphant Germany would follow is unpredictable. But the peril of Paris, with or without Italian intervention, would from the evidence seem more immediate than that of London.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE SHOREHAM TERRACE will open this evening positively—unless the weather man goes into a tantrum and turns on the rain. There's no lovelier spot in the country, or in the world, for that matter, than the Terrace. The pink rambler roses are in bloom, hundreds of tiny blue lights will twinkle like earthbound stars and the new multicolored fountain will be a-sparkle. Robert and Paul will find you the best tables to be had, and Maestro Barnee and his boys are all set with new programs of luxury dance music . . . The floor show includes lithe Emilee Adreon, Wizard Serge Flash and the Woolford dachspuppies.

S. S. POTOMAC DOUBLE-HEADER. Gene Krupa's band will play for the Saturday moonlight cruise on the S. S. Potomac. And Eddie Duchin, plus piano and orchestra, will be on hand for the Potomac's Sunday sailing. Looks like a name band record.

"SHOE THE WILD MARE." That's the name of the darnedest dance ever conceived by our dance-inventive South American friends. Aida and Bobby Cruz offer "Shoe the Wild Mare" at the Madrillon every Saturday night. It was started as an experiment, but turned out to be such a building-rocking success that it's now a regular Madrillon Saturday special. Put it down in your date book and don't miss.

THE "FLYING WALTZ?" airminded dance creation, is being offered in the Pall Mall Room this week in honor of the 500 private flyers now visiting in Washington. It's the creation of Aviatrix Margo Tanner and Dancer Ethel Fistere. This is Pall Mall's last week before its summer closing.

"THE SLAVE AND THE WHIP" is the startling and tropical dance being offered by Burnes and Swanson, current stars at the Lotus. Never before have we seen "woo pitching" via blacksnake whip. But it's an idea. This pair also offers a fine version of the more familiar "Tabu." The new Al Davis Girls are no end cunning as Hungarian gypsies with tambourines. Buddy Shaner is singing "Imaginaton" and Sybil Roth does control dances in fascinating chiffon pajamas.

EVALYN TYNER was dared to sing the other night in the Neptune. And Evelyn cannot take a dare. So she sung her own song, "My World Is Yours," so tellingly that she drew six encores. Will probably be singing off and on whenever she takes the notion.

PRETTY! PRETTY! Lynn Allison warbling "Londonderry Air" from the Flagship bandstand. We can't understand it, but not one of Lynn's pictures do her 10 per cent justice . . . Lucille Doran, brown-eyed vocalist of Reggie Childs' orchestra in the Metronome Room, in a much-beruffled white tulle gown that looks a twin for the one worn by Anna Neagle in "Irene" . . . All of the Casino Royal's Dancing Redheads in those brocade and chiffon formals in two tones of light blue . . . Hi Hat's Angie Rodante in her tricolor sports outfit of white blouse, blue-and-white striped skirt with red sash and bolero and tiny red hair-bows . . . And the Nightingale's Mary La Marr is looking like a million, too, in a sports get-up of tan tweed jacket, yellow flannel skirt and red crochet hat and scarf.

LOST DECORATION. Dick Leith, trombonist with Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, is looking irked. He started to raise a mustache last week, but hard-hearted Maestro Paul spied the incipient decoration, demanded its immediate removal. "How can I look like Gable without a mustache?" complains Dick.

HELEN MYERS, of the Carlton cocktail lounge, is also on view in "The Great Waltz" at the Little Theater. She's the lass who walks up to Leading Man Fernand Gravet in one sequence and hands him a fiddle.

THE MELODY BOYS. Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, says that The Post's Hi Phillips is one of his favorite people. One of Phillips' first columns was written about the doings of Pete and his orchestra when they were playing in the old La Java . . . Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, has written another song, s'help us. It's "Just Say Okay," and it sounds something swell as sung by Eileen George . . . Owner Vincent Gallagher of the King Cole Room says he thinks he'll install a putting green in the spot for the benefit of Singer Arthur Todd. Says Mr. Gallagher, "When Arthur misses, he'll probably hit a high note . . . Don't be alarmed if you can't understand Lew Berman in the Rainbow Room. He's probably up to his favorite trick of making up his own "unknown language" as he goes along . . . Those astounding arrangements played at River Bend on "Swing Nights" (Fridays) are the creations of Maestro George Stein and his right bowers, Lee Mason and Harry Echols.

SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER and 20 of Florida's best Democrats recently held a get-together party in the Mayfair. Lyle Smith and his Trio played all the Southern songs they knew (and a couple they didn't know).

AROUND THE EATERIES. Inspection of the logbook at O'Donnell's Sea Grill shows that guests from 20 States have visited there in the last few weeks. . . . The new policy of serving dinners in the Harrington Tavern is proving an A-1 hit with the customers. . . . Dick's Grill is headquarters for many musicians, visiting show people and newspapermen.

Paris, May 28.—This has been the blackest day of the 18 days since the German offensive through Belgium and the Netherlands began.

The news that King Leopold of Belgium had capitulated came to everybody as an utter surprise. Only last evening Belgian Premier Pierlot had declared on the French radio that the Belgian cabinet had unanimously declared its determination, whatever happened, to continue to fight.

That declaration could scarcely be interpreted as a warning of the King's impending action. Those few who were in the secret held it close, perhaps hoping against hope. Toward 3 o'clock those who were awake and listening heard the German radio announce that today the campaign against the Belgians would be over but even than what was about to happen did not seem credible.

Grim as Sedan

Never in French history, which includes Waterloo and Sedan, has there been a grimmer moment than when Premier Reynaud announced the determination to carry on and denouncing King Leopold's action. Those who were at breakfast could eat and drink no more. Those who were on their way to work stopped, aghast.

But, from that first moment and all day, the tide of resolution has kept rising.

"That's not the end. We will beat them yet," is the conclusion of all the millions of conversations that have filled the day.

The French army is not beaten and although the British and French in that crowded northern corner are in a desperate plight there is still a British army in France, a growing army, fresh and enthusiastic, with new equipment and unlimited supplies moving steadily forward into line.

"If we can hold for a month, we can win," Reynaud declared the other day and the spirit to hold, and do more than hold, is firmer than ever.

Belgians Cry "Treason!"

"We are going into this battle considering that we are already dead," one man declared. "That way we have nothing to fear and can conquer."

For the Belgians crowded in whatever refuges they can find with friends, in hotels, camping in the open country on a night of torrential rain, today has been the grimmest of all.

Their newspaper La Meuse, now published in Paris, came out at midday with the banner head, "Belgium Betrayed by Her King."

That is the universal attitude—a mingled angry resentment and sorrow. Refugees who yesterday walked the streets or drove in their cars with which they had left their homes proudly flaunting the Belgian colors could be seen weeping openly in public places, their spirits shattered, ashamed.

Before making his declaration over the radio, Premier Pierlot, accompanied by Foreign Minister Spaak and the presidents of the two houses of Parliament, laid a wreath at the foot of the statue of King Albert I in the Cours de la Reine. There was no inscription on the wreath, only a simple band of crepe.

Many thousands of refugees were present, and among other wreaths laid at the base of the statue was one which bore the inscription, "Refugees Today, Soldiers Tomorrow."

Can Make 1,000 Planes a Day, Ford Claims

Freedom From U. S. 'Meddling,' Standard Design Held Necessary

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 28.—Henry Ford, lifelong opponent of war in any form, said today that much as he hated war, "if it became necessary the Ford Motor Co. could—with the counsel of men like Lindbergh and Rickenbacker, under our own supervision and without meddling by Government agencies—swing into the production of 1,000 airplanes of standard design a day."

It would take about six months under those conditions, he said in an interview, to reach that level of production.

"Of course," he emphasized, "they would have to be of standard design; equally important would be freedom of action on our own part, so that we would not have the handicaps of red tape that slowed down production during the World War."

Ford said he was convinced the present conflict in Europe would not last very long "because the United States won't get into it."

"Don't misunderstand me," he said. "A lot of pressure is being brought to push us into it, and there is real danger in enormous 'defensive' armament, but I am confident we can keep out of it."

It was suggested to Ford that "a thousand planes a day is an enormous volume of production."

"So was 10,000 motorcars a day, but we did it; so was the production of one Eagle boat a day during the World War, but we did it. Incidentally, we would have reached the level of one submarine chaser a day much sooner but for a certain amount of red tape that had to be contended with."

Ford said he regarded the oceans as our "best protection" against invasion. "An enemy can't haul tanks and other mechanized equipment of war across guarded oceans," he said.

'Our Town,' in Film Form, Surpasses Every Hope

Wilder's Pulitzer Prize Play Retains Full Power; Patriotic Short-Reels Surge to the Fore; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WHEN THE SCREEN RIGHTS to Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play of "Our Town" were acquired by United Artists, considerable speculation was spread over this space as to what manner of film treatment could be adopted to preserve the unique qualities and the power of a drama that was presented upon the stage without settings and with only the most meager "props." All doubts of the cinema's ability to meet the demands of an extraordinary work were dissipated at yesterday afternoon's preview of "Our Town" in its celluloid form.

BELL

The most immediate impression is that the deep human appeal and strength of "Our Town" are inherent in the lines of the Wilder drama of life, love and death in a small New Hampshire town and not dependent upon the extent to which it may be scenically dressed or undressed. Under the direction of Sam Wood—probably Hollywood's greatest sentimentalist, as well as one of its foremost directors—the picture departs as drastically from conventional screen methods as the stage original did from the usual practices of Broadway. The utilization of a complete complement of settings and "properties" only occasionally dulls the effectiveness of Frank Craven in his original role of the narrator. A "happy ending," furthermore, has been contrived that does not necessitate the deletion of the poignant closing scenes of Mr. Wilder's tremendously moving play.

How all this has been accomplished will be revealed more impressively than it might be set down here when "Our Town" comes along to one of the Loew houses. How its many departures from habitual camera technique may be received by the amusement-seeking public, of course, remains to be seen. At the moment, it strikes this column that Mr. Wilder penned himself a simple and homely drama that cannot be seriously impaired in the view of any thoughtful audience. The film version may not retain all of the grimness and morbidity of the stage version, but that should prove an asset in the large public view

There can be little quibbling about the cast Sol Lesser assembled for his revolutionary translation of a great play into a medium for which its suitability was held in some doubt. William Holden, perhaps, was not the ideal selection for the role of George Gibbs, the play's foremost juvenile character, but it would be difficult to find much the matter with the contributions of Martha Scott, Fay Bainter, Beulah Bondi, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbe, Stuart Erwin and Frank Craven to the other pivotal roles. And, as I say, Director Sam Wood has an instinctive feeling for this sort of thing. "Our Town," at any rate, seems destined to be one of the most discussed of the season's releases.

Preceding yesterday's unspooling of "Our Town," an inspiring ing short subject. "The Flag Speaks," was run off. Executed in Technicolor, this autobiography of the Stars and Stripes comes along at an opportune time. I don't know when or where it is to be shown, but it is worth watching for and listening to attentively and seriously.

It seems worth a reminder, too, that tomorrow, Memorial Day, is the day on which all of the Warner Brothers residential theaters will present special holiday matinees with the "Star-Spangled Banner" and patriotic short subjects, that already have been recited here, added to each bill. Doors will open uniformly at 12:30 p. m.

"Choose to Live," the first sound film on the subject of cancer and the only Public Health Service motion picture to be booked extensively in commercial theaters, will be shown at the Bethesda Theater, Bethesda, Md., today and tomorrow at 6:15 and 9:25 p. m. I would not be sure that is "entertainment," but, at least, it should be enlightening.

If it is a hillbilly jamboree you are looking for, rather than a celluloid tip on health conservation, that can be found over at the Ashton Theater, Arlington, Va., come Saturday. For one day only, the extra added attraction will be Tom Emerson and His Kentucky Mountaineers in "Rhythm in the Hills." It is a considerable company that sourrounds Mr. Emerson in this bit of friskiness.

Why-Producers-Drop-Dead Note

"I'm absolutely satisfied with the picturization of my book, 'The Mortal Storm,'" was the comment of Phyllis Bottome, English novelist, after a preview of the film!

I see that Judy Garland is getting ready to graduate from high school, and Metro will give her a party. They gave Mickey Rooney one, too, when he graduated. Boss said, "Hurray! No more school! You work tonight, Mickey." Mickey worked till 3 a. m. other morning, was at radio station from 12 till 3 p. m., at Hollywood Bowl for two hours in the evening for "I Am an American," without a grumble because he had no time to play.

Understand the famous banker who was visiting here last week wanted a major studio to do a propaganda picture which would nullify the Neutrality Act. Studio, of course, said "No."

Warners have signed English Elizabeth Earl for "River's End." She has four brothers in the army over there, a sister in the land army. Elizabeth was in the ambulance squad. Guess they figured tax money would help more than her services, so she got permit to come.

Tom Mix returns to harness June 1, when he leaves Hollywood for a series of one-night vaudeville stands . . . Bobby Breen is again up for pix. A few months ago it was announced that Breen would retire until his voice finished changing. Now he wants to go dramatic, no singing. Anna Q. Nilsson is trying for a picture comeback. Here's luck.

If Noel Coward put on the same show here he did in New York for the Allied cause, he'd get $45,000 in one night as he did there. They paid $10 to get in, then $5 more to reach the inner circle where they were entertained, and I mean entertained, by the biggest stars for half an hour.

Then Noel said, "Thank you very much. I'm very sorry, but you'll have to leave now, because there are 500 more people outside waiting to get in." And they left smiling.

And there at that ball, sitting quietly in a corner, practically unknown, were Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier—showing just what effect the failure of their "Romeo and Juliet" made on the public mind.

Cole Porter arrives in a few weeks to try and persuade Marlene Dietrich to come to New York for his musical in the fall . . . Could "The Devil and Miss Jones" Metro's now producing be a sequel to "Susan and God?"

Radios were banned on Edward G. Robinson set because of distracting effect of war news—so when a suspicious noise came from the prop room, Director William Dieterle stalked over—found a stagehand listening. His worry getting the better of him, Dieterle asked, "What's happened now?" "Happened!" moaned the stagehand, "I've just lost five bucks on the Brooklyn Dodgers."

The funniest sight of the week was on the Metro lot, when the Nazi storm troopers from "Mortal Storm" ate luncheon in a Kosher restaurant.

JULIO ALVAREZ del Vayo, who was the Foreign Minister of the Spanish Republic, has written a new book about the war in Spain—a book called "Freedom's Battle," in which he tells the inside story of his country's long struggle . . . Senor del Vayo read Sir Nevile Henderson's book, "Failure of a Mission," just as he heard the news dispatch that Sir Samuel Hoare had been sent to Madrid to represent Britain there . . . "Henderson's was the failure of a mission," said Del Vayo, "and Hoare's is the mission of a failure."

JIMMY DURANTE'S "Life With Father" satire on the Roosevelt family has been eliminated from the new show, "Keep Off the Grass" . . . Happy Malone, first of the Murder, Inc., gang to be convicted of murder, told his keepers that he holds no grievances against the witnesses who testified against him—except for Reles. "Just leave Reles in a room with me alone for 10 minutes," Malone pleaded, "and I'd be satisfied to go to the chair immediately."

DR. OTTO LUDWIG Preminger, instructor in the drama department at Yale University, conducted the final examinations of his class at New Haven. He called upon one pupil, Miss Soans, and startled her by asking, "What is a critic?" . . . The girl thought that Preminger had said "Cricket" and began her answer: "It is an insect that" . . . "Just a moment," the instructor interrupted, "I said 'Critic,' not 'Cricket'" . . . "The answer still goes," Miss Soans persisted . . . Preminger, mindful of the complimentary notices he had received for his performance and direction in Clara Boothe's "Margin for Error," corrected the student: "It does not still go."

EMMERICH KALMAN, the composer, has been wearing the same suit of clothes for five days and is apologizing to his friends for failing to adhere to the suit-changing custom of his newly adopted country . . . His predicament is a result of Mrs. Kalman's desire to see Hollywood, despite his protests that he likes New York . . . All his clothes are in the bags which Mrs. Kalman has packed, ready to be shipped off as soon as the composer sees the proper light.

MARIANNE OSWALD, the French music hall actress, has a strange idea of Hollywood hospitality.. On her first day there the first home she visited was Robert Riskin's—where the host's dog bit her . . . Collier's is preparing an article about Sam Zolotow, the veteran drama editor of the New York Times . . . The plane hostess who was publicized recently as "Miss United Air Lines" made her debut at the Provincetown Playhouse under the name of Margaret Dickinson . . . Broadway's vaudeville stars are opening new fields of operations in the summer camps. Joe E. Lewis and Block & Sully will head the bill at Totam Lodge . . . John Gunther complains about the time at which he must broadcast for NBC, because it means he can't listen to Raymond Gram Swing.

LAURENCE OLIVIER, who now is portraying "Romeo," one of the greatest lovers in story books, wasn't as believable during his one opportunity to play a love scene with Greta Garbo, as in "Queen Christina." When he placed his arms around her she stepped away and moaned: "Awwwnnn nawwh," and couldn't continue . . . The director suggested that Oliver become better acquainted with Greta Garbo before embracing her. And so he talked to Greta about places they both had visited; for hours he rhapsodized about the fjords of Norway, the sunsets in Sweden and the Bois de Boulogne. But John Gilbert replaced Oliver in that movie, for the only reaction of Garbo's had been a weary sigh: "Life is sotch a fonny theeng."

FRANZ LEHAR, NOW in Budapest, called a few days ago that he is willing to come to America. The plans are for him to tour South America and conduct his "Merry Widow" there. Lehar and his wife expected to sail from Italy, but their trip is being delayed because the Rex postponed its sailing . . . "Broadway at the Fair" will be broadcast from the fairgrounds daily by Jack Eigen . . . A "We Miss Mark Hellinger" party will be held at Toots Shor's, coinciding with the first showing of his newest movie, "Brother Orchid." Hellinger will speak to his friends assembled here via a loudspeaker attached to the phone . . . Raymond Massey and Ruth Gordon may tour in "There Shall Be No Night" immediately, because the play's message is of immediate importance.

Song Original

Judy Garland has an item which song-manuscript collectors would give plenty for—the one and only work manuscript of "Buds Won't Bud," the song introduced by her in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante." E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen, writers of the song, autographed the manuscript for her.

Movie-Making Proves Itself CockeyedGame

Garson Kanin Atempts To Rationalize the Scenario Puzzle

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Staff Correspondent

Hollywood, May 28.—It is a thoroughly cock-eyed fact that many a time a movie actor plays throughout a picture without the slightest idea of what the story's about. Not until he goes to the preview and sees the jigsaw of film unscrambled does he learn why he kissed Miss so-and-so one morning, and kicked her where it hurt the worst that same afternoon.

This state of affairs usually is caused by the fact that the scenario still isn't finished. Even after the actors have started to act. The story comes down to the director a sheet at a time, and even then not consecutively. He frequently shoots the final scene first, and the first scene last and depends on the cutting department to make everything all right again.

And that's no way to make movies, according to Garson Kanin, the 27-year-old director, whose every picture so far has been a hit. Kanin said how could an actor act his best if he didn't know why he was doing what?

Ordered Reading of Script

There was no answer to that one at RKO studios, where he is about to put into production the screen version of the late Sidney Howard's stage success, "They Knew What They Wanted." So Kanin ordered his whole cast and production crew, numbering some 50 people, into projection room five for a reading of the script. Only one not present was Carole Lombard, who had a bad case of poison oak. She reported to Kanin by phone that her whole face was swollen and her mouth was so puffed she couldn't eat. He excused her.

The rest of the staff, headed by Charles Laughton, was on tap at 8:30 p. m. Kanin sat at a desk, took a drink of water, and began to read the script, a tome about the size of a Chicago telephone book.

The story, which won a Pulitzer prize for its dramatic excellence, sounds sordid in resume. It's about a middle-aged Italian wine grower in northern California, who wants to marry a San Francisco waitress. She visits him at his vineyard and has a child by his hired hand. The wine grower (Laughton) loves her so much that he marries her anyway. The hired hand leaves and everybody's happy, because they knew what they wanted, fadeout.

Director Is Dialectitian

So the slim, soft-voiced Kanin read the whole script, of 163 scenes, in dialect for Laughton's part, and falsetto for Lombard's. He read all the stage directions and the camera instructions and he didn't finish the job until 11:30 p. m. Then he asked all hands to criticize the screen adaptation, as written by Robert Ardrey. He got his criticisms, all right. At 1 a. m., when we left, he was locked in argument with Laughton over how a wine grower ought to talk.

Main result was that everybody (except the executive next to us, who snored a little) learned all about "They Knew What They Wanted." It had better be good; Else a lot of people wasted a long night.

How Kanin happens to be making the picture in the first place provides one of those Hollywood stories:

A few months back he selected two actors, a man and a woman, and told President George Schaefer he'd like to star them in "Cyrano de Bergerac." Schaefer agreed that was an excellent idea, but suggested he take it up with Harry Edington, production chief. Edington said, fine; but why not use Lombard and Laughton, who already were under contract?

Kanin agreed that Lombard and Laughton were the ideal team. But why not put them into "They Knew What They Wanted" which the studio already owned, instead of into "Cyrano," which it didn't?

Prefer Cold Fish

Ray Milland learned during filming of "Untamed" that Alaskan huskies can make a meal of raw fish without endangering their health in northern climes, but may eat fish only if it is boned in southern California. When the fish is frozen, Milland found out, the dogs bite through the bones, but when the fish is thawed the bones penetrate the dog.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, May 28 (INS).—These are panicky days in Hollywood—but apparently Old Debil Economy (c'est la guerre) hasn't scared George J. Schaefer, president of RKO. Today in New York, he made RKO conventioners, eyes pop when he announced the program for next year. According to Mr. Schaefer two new musicals have been bought for Anna Neagle, "No, No, Nanette," the old Vincent Youm an hit and the equally old, but good, "Sunny," with Jerome Kern's music. All of which sounds as if Miss Neagle's musical, "Irene," clicked at the boxoffice better than her more serious "Nurse Edith Cavell."

LOUELLA PARSONS

But Mr. Schaefer wasn't through with the report of his buying spree, by a long shot. An original romantic comedy by Paul Jarrico, "Tom, Dick and Harry," is lined up for Ginger Rogers, with Garson Kanin directing. Gene Towne and Graham Baker will follow "Swiss Family Robinson" with a novelty, "How to Meet a Man," and, now hold your breath, Orson Welles flew to the convention to tell them he's decided on "John Citizen, U. S. A.," for his first film and will be ready to start in two weeks. I can't wait.

Rita Hayworth's home lot, Columbia, is finally realizing with a vengeance what a tremendous bet they have in this dark-eyed, curvacious youngster. Just got the tip that Rita will be co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the Ben Hecht picture, "Until I Die," which Hecht will produce and young Doug will codirect. Rita is currently playing opposite Brian Aherne in "Gribouille," and it was as a result of her first few days' work that she was handed the top femme spot in the Hecht opus. No young actress in Hollywood has received more publicity than Rita these past months. Every one of the picture mags has carried a cover photo or layout of her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Nancy Kelly phones to say her engagement with Irving Cummings, jr., has been definitely broken. She's decided matrimony and a career won't mix; Georgie Jessel arrived this yawning at 8 a. m., and was met at the plane by a sleepy-eyed child bride. His passage was booked under the name Sam Carleton, which was the reason the press no savvy; Olivia de Havilland and Jimmie Stewart have told Warner bosses they don't want to make stills together; Kay Kyser's songbird—and gal friend—Ginny Simms has a new nose.

Luise Rainer and Carson Kanin la mazeing—and amazing. Another interesting but not so novel twosome, Bette Davis and Bob Tapplinger, at the same spot listening to Greta Keller; Nan Grey and Jockey Jackie Westrope celebrated his reinstatement by the California Racing Board at La Conga. Wera Engels and Ivan Lebedeff were there, too, dining with German refugee friends; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, first actor ever to be elected an honorary member of Delta Kappa, threw a big party at Victor Hugo's for the United States Chapter.

Gene Autrey got a big laugh out of the crowd at Hugo's when he got up and said: "It's funny to be playing to you who have probably never seen a picture of mine. In fact they play in such small towns Mrs. Roosevelt hasn't even been there!" Jackie Cooper squired Bonita Granville to the Pirates Den where she warbled and he played the drums. Proprietor Rudy Vallee was on hand at the den with Millicent Batchelor—their fourth date in a row.

That's all today.

Churchill's Address To Commons

Prime Minister Warns Sad News Might Be Expected

London, May 28.—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

By the Associated Press

The House will be aware the King of the Belgians yesterday sent a plenipotentiary to the German command asking for suspension of arms on the Belgian front. (Cries of "shame.")

The British and French governments instructed their generals immediately to dissociate themselves from this procedure (cheers) and to persevere with the operations in which they are now engaged.

The German command agreed to the Belgian proposals and the Belgians ceased to resist the enemy's will at 4 o'clock this morning. I have no intention of suggesting to the House that we should attempt at this moment to pass judgment on the action of the King of the Belgians in his capacity as commander-in-chief of the Belgian army.

This army fought very bravely, and both suffered and inflicted heavy losses. The Belgian government has dissociated itself from the act (cheer) and declared itself to be the only legal government of Belgium and formally announced its resolve to continue the war by the side of the Allies, who came to the aid of Belgium on her urgent appeal.

Whatever our feelings from facts so far known to us, we must remember that sense of brotherhood between the many peoples who have fallen into the power of the aggressor, and those who still confront him will play its part in better days than those through which we are passing.

The situation of the British and French armies now engaged in a most severe struggle and beset on three sides and from the air is evidently extremely grave.

Surrender of the Belgian army in this manner adds appreciably to the grievous peril, but our troops are in good heart and fighting with the utmost discipline and tenacity. I shall, of course, abstain from comment on what, with the powerful assistance of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force, they are doing or hope to do. I expect to make a statement to the House on the general position when the result of the intense struggle now going on can be known and measured.

This, perhaps, may not be until the beginning of next week.

Meanwhile, the House must prepare itself for hard and heavy things. I have only to add that nothing which can happen in this battle can in any way relieve us of our duty to defend the world cause to which we have bound ourselves, nor can it destroy our confidence in our power to make our way—as on former occasions in our history—through disaster and grief to ultimate defeat of our enemy.

Inventor Sues on Claims For Toy Rail Patents

Arthur A. Johnson, Bridgeport, Conn., yesterday asked the District Court to compel the Government to issue him patents on 22 improvements in toy railroad tracks he claimed he invented.

Johnson's method was to bend flat sheets of metal to form tracks, both straight and curved, with switches, etc. Patent examiners rejected Johnson's claims because they said he got the idea from the design of full size railroad tracks.

Text of Reynaud's Speech on the Belgian Surrender

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 28.—Following is the partial text of French Premier Reynaud's radio announcement of the surrender of the Belgian army by King Leopold:

I must announce to the French people a grave event. This event occurred last night. France can no longer count on the Belgian army.

Since 4 a. m. Tuesday (10 p. m. E. S. T. Monday) the French army and the British army have been fighting alone in the north against the enemy.

You know what the situation was.

After the rupture of our front May 14, the German army filtered between our armies, which found themselves broken into two groups, one to the north and the other to the south.

On the south it is the French divisions which are holding the new front following the Somme and Aisne rivers and then rejoining intact the Maginot Line.

In the north was a group of three armies—the Belgian army, the British expeditionary corps and several French divisions in which many of us have loved ones.

This group of three armies was under the command of Gen. Blanchard. It was supplied via Dunkerque. The French and British armies were defending this port on the south and west, the Belgian army on the north.

It was this Belgian army which has just brusquely capitulated unconditionally on the field of battle on the order of its King without warning their French and British comrades in combat, opening the way to Dunkerque to the Germans.

Eighteen days ago this same King, who up to that time had seemed to attach the same value to the word of Germany as that of the Allies, sent us a call for help.

To this we replied, following the plan which had been established since last December by the Allied general staffs.

But, in full battle, King Leopold III of Belgium—without warning Gen. Blanchard, without consideration or a word for the French and British soldiers who had come to the help of his country in response to his anguished appeal—King Leopold III laid down his arms.

It is a fact without precedent in history.

The Belgian government has told me that the decision of the King was taken against the unanimous sentiment of his responsible ministers. The government added it had decided itself to put at the service of the Allied cause all the forces of the country which were still available and particularly that it wished to raise a new army and collaborate in the work of arming France.

It is about our soldiers that we are thinking.

They can say their honor is intact. They are making a magnificent effort along the whole front. Every day during the 18 days of battle they have given thousands of examples of heroism. Young French generals who have hardly had time to replace their elders have already covered themselves with glory.

Our leaders and our soldiers form a bloc in which the country has entire confidence and which tomorrow will draw the admiration of the world.

We knew that sad days were coming. They have come.

France has been invaded a hundred times and never beaten. That much our courageous populations in the north must remember. It is from the tests we are awaiting that the new spirit of France will be forged—a spirit which will be greater than ever.

Our faith in victory is intact.

The strength of every soldier, of every French man and every French woman, is increased ten times. Misfortune has always bolstered France. She has never been as united as today.

On the new line which has just been established by our great chieftain, Gen. Maxime Weygant, in full accord with Marshal Petain, on the Somme and on the Aisne, we will hold—and because we have held we will win."

All Americas Stand Together In Defense, Welles Warns

Envoys of the 20 Latin American republics yesterday heard Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, warn that an aggressive act against any one of the American nations by a foreign power would be considered a challenge to them all.

Speaking in the Hispanic room of the Library of Congress at the dedication of a mural painting depicting Christopher Columbus' coat of arms, Welles told the assembled Ambassadors, Minister and diplomatic attaches that moral, as well as material, preparedness is necessary for the preservation of freedom.

"Too many of us in these recent generations have grown fat—fat physically and fat mentally," he said. "We have led ourselves to believe that we were all of us secure because we wanted to believe that we were secure. We had reached the point where many of us even thought only what it was most pleasant, what it was the easiest, to think.

"And how many of us here in these United States have been preoccupied primarily with what we alleged the country and the government owed us, rather than with our obligations and our duty to the country and the Government!"

Facing the more than 250 diplomats and United States officials, Welles expressed the belief that "we are at last fully aware of these dangers in the Americas."

"Any act of aggression," he said, "by a non-American power, whether it be committed south or north of the equator, is a challenge to the security of all and will be so regarded by them."

Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress, introduced Undersecretary Welles. The program was broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Believed to be the first example of mural painting on steel installed in any buildings, the art work dedicated yesterday is 16 feet by 10 feet and weighs 1,200 pounds. It is a gift of the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, of Pittsburgh, which supplied the material and donated the services of Mrs. Buell Mullen, of Chicago, the artist.

Excellent Appointment

The appointment of Jay Pierrepont Moffat as Minister to Canada is simultaneously a well-deserved tribute to a very distinguished member of the career service in the Department of State and a recognition of the rapidly increasing importance of Canadian-American relations.

Mr. Moffat has had wide and varied experience as a foreign service official, fulfilling all his posts with distinction. As American consul general in Australia a few years ago he laid the foundations for the establishment of formal diplomatic relations with the Commonwealth which led this year to an exchange of ministers between Washington and Canberra.

More recently, as chief of the European division in the Department of State, he has demonstrated notable administrative capacity and a clear and realistic understanding of the revolutionary forces now operating in the world. He has been a wise counselor in a period of trial and confusion.

At Ottawa Mr. Moffat's exceptional talents will have ample scope for expression. As shadows deepen over Great Britain the future role of Canada in the British Commonwealth of Nations becomes a question of much more than academic interest to Americans. It is encouraging that the United States is now to be represented at the Canadian capital by a statesman of demonstrated ability and good judgment.

A Nation Unprepared

The spiritual unpreparedness of America in the present apocalyptic conflict, said Mr. Archibald MacLeish the other night, is more grievous than our military weakness, pronounced as that may be. And unless we "regain the conviction that there are final things for which democracy will fight, we can leave our plans unbuilt and our battleships on paper, for we shall not need them."

This statement is significant. First, because it comes from a poet who has looked with little more favor than his gifted colleague, T. S. Eliot, on some aspects of the society that a century and a half of American democracy has produced. Second, because Mr. MacLeish has put the blame on the writers of his own generation and more especially on the war novels of men like Dos Passos and Hemingway. Such works, he declared, have so affected American youth that it refuses to believe that a "free society of free men is worth fighting for."

Here Mr. MacLeish approached a vital truth. But there are many who must think that his examination of it was superficial. If it is true that the spiritual vacuum in which our youth lives is the work of now middle-aged writers, it may also be true that the very despairs of those writers were the creation of philosophers and scientists who preceded them. For Mr. MacLeish's generation is one that, in its time, fed freely upon Darwin, Nietzsche, Bergson, Marx and Freud.

Surely the roots of the spiritual disorders of this uphappy century can be traced to those preceding decades for which we now express nostalgia. Perhaps they go even farther back. It may readily be argued that most of the moral evils that Mr. MacLeish and others seek to describe as "fascism" inhere in democracy itself—if by democracy we mean our heritages from the late eighteenth century political and social revolutions.

Does not the notion of "total war," for instance, derive from the wholesale conscriptions by Carnot for the cause of freedom, equality and fraternity? Does not the principle of "autarky" follow logically enough from a combination of mass production and political nationalism? And what of these terrible toys that a seemingly irresponsible science has placed in the hands of conquerors, wherewith to destroy us? Can we not trace this folly to Condorcet's theory of "inevitable progress"?

If youth, as Mr. MacLeish says, refuses to respond to our "tags and slogans;" if "all words are suspect," can it be that this is because they are merely "tags and slogans"? Precisely what, for instance, does Mr. MacLeish mean by "a free society of free men"? Is it not a glittering generality, with vital significance for a very small percentage of our population?

Perhaps if we could think out clear answers to these questions we could translate them into terms that even our morally enervated youth would be proud and happy to accept. We might even discover that our real task now is not so much to preserve meretricious values that we dread to lose, but rather to restore real values that we have long since carelessly thrown away.

To Command Respect

In his statement in Parliament yesterday Prime Minister Churchill said that "I have no intention of suggesting to the House that we should attempt at this moment to pass judgment" on the Belgian capitulation.

That was a sensible and courageous observation: sensible because no useful end can possibly be served by recriminations over this terrible blow to Allied hopes; courageous because the families of tens of thousands of soldiers in the British Expeditionary Force, now threatened with obliteration, may be pardoned for feeling bitter over the Belgian collapse and all that it implies for them.

It would have been more impressive if Premier Reynaud, in his broadcast announcing the catastrophe to the French people, had followed the same line. His scathing denunciation of King Leopold's action will do nothing to strengthen the solidarity of Allied resistance. It tends to magnify rather than minimize the magnitude of the blow.

The only way to confront a disaster of this sort is to close the ranks and utilize energy in action rather than in talk. That is what the British are doing and that is why faith in their recovery is even today by no means dead.

It could be argued that British statesmanship, by going to war with Germany as long as that nation was headed east, made the most terrible blunder in British history. It could be argued that the guarantee to Poland was, in view of Germany's greatly underrated strength, colossal stupidity. It could be argued that Chamberlain, having started the policy of appeasement, was lacking in the fundamentals of wisdom not to have continued in the line laid down at Munich.

But the British people are now offering no alibis and placing no blame on others. With backs to the wall, confronted by the most terrible threat in the history of the empire, they are fighting with that dogged determination which so often has brought them through. And thus, whatever the outcome, the British will continue to command respect.

There is a moral in all this for the United States. Some Americans have done a tremendous amount of talking in this war. They have been excessively free with gratuitous and offensive advice as to what others should do, either in their own or in our behalf. But at no time, as everybody knows, has this country been really prepared to back up these bold words with deeds.

Lindbergh was absolutely right when, in his much-criticized radio speech ten days ago, he said that "the course we have been following in recent months leads to neither strength, nor friendship, nor peace." We cannot aid others, he concluded, "until we have first placed our own country in a position of spiritual and material leadership and strength."

The swift march of events in Europe should teach Americans that it is time to stop chattering and get to work. This is no time to criticize the Belgian King, who doubtless thought only of the welfare of his own people and did his duty to them as he saw it. This is no time to criticize the French or British for what they have done or may decide to do in this their Calvary. It is, preeminently, a time to set our own house in order.

Faint foreshadowings of what that may involve are beginning to appear. It is said that there may be no new automobile models next year, as a result of concentrating the machine tool industry on defense. Advocacy of compulsory military service is increasing. Curtailment of accustomed luxuries, on the one hand, acceptance of new duties, on the other, is very much in order.

In this novel attitude of genuine self-sacrifice is found the rational reaction of America to the trend of events in Europe. It is time to develop the "indomitable will" and the "toughness of fiber" for which the President called in his recent message to Congress on defense. When we have done so will be time enough to judge as to the extent to which others possess and prove those characteristics.

An Anniversary

His friends will sympathize fully with the refusal of Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne to make any celebration yesterday of the thirtieth anniversary of the inception of a diplomatic career which began here in Washington.

The Minister of Norway would not be the man who is known so well and admired so much, if he were not aware that the times are too grave and too melancholy for personal rejoicings or compliments. But, of course, he knows it far better than we. For his countrymen have tasted and are still tasting in fearful fact the wholesale misery and terror that we know only in imagination.

Yet it would be equally inappropriate to let the occasion pass without some tribute to his success among us. Few diplomatists anywhere have more ably served their countries, for few have made such abundant and lasting friendships. Part of the secret, no doubt, lies in Mr. Morgenstierne's genuine understanding and love of America and Americans. Years ago, writing of "the American spirit" he defined it as "a confident faith in the ultimate destinies of the human race—and of the American people in particular."

It must be a like confidence in human destiny that sustains his King and his people in their continuing struggle against a might so overwhelming that it now bids fair to crush the mightiest nations. Certainly, these words could well serve as our own text for this dark hour.

Essential To Defense

Demands for expert and nonpartisan administration of the United States' defense program are assuming the proportions of a chorus. Everywhere there is genuine concern over the Nation's military weakness in this period of grave uncertainties. Muddling through at such a time would be inexcusable. So the demand that the defense program be put into the most competent hands available is being reechoed wherever thoughtful men meet to discuss the state of the Nation.

President Roosevelt has given assurance that experts will be called in. Yesterday he revived the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense composed of industrialists and representatives of labor, agriculture and consumers. Apparently this group will be expected to coordinate the defense program. But it is obvious that something more than coordination is needed. Appeals for a centralized agency to direct the industrial phase of the defense program are not likely to be quieted by the restoration of this advisory commission.

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association, took advantage of the National Aviation Forum to declare that "the number of organizations involved in our current defense program is already too great." In effect, Col. Gorrell reechoed the point made by former President Hoover in his radio address on Monday night. Both these speeches are underlined by the suggestion of William B. Stout, distinguished airplane designer, that the task of research be assigned to the most competent engineers and production of defense equipment to practical industrialists familiar with mass production methods.

Because of his close contacts with governmental organizations behind the lines in the World War, Mr. Hoover's advice is particularly valuable. He calls for a munitions administration with one man at the head. That executive would be responsible only to the President, although he would be advised by a nonpartisan board representing the Army, Navy, labor, transportation, manufacturing and agriculture. Since production of the needed equipment is an industrial undertaking, the administrator should be an experienced industrialist.

Under a set-up of this kind politics and bureaucratic delays could be quickly brushed aside. The rearmament program could be stepped up without danger of confusion and wrangling during the forthcoming political campaigns. The country would have reasonable assurance that the defense program approved by both parties would go forward without interruption regardless of what may be decided at the polls in November.

A centralized munitions administration would not, of course, obviate the need for changes in the Cabinet. Such an agency would merely supervise the manufacture and delivery of equipment requested by the Army and Navy. Equally vital are the planning of defense strategy, the designing of military equipment and the training of men to use it. Those tasks fall directly upon the War and Navy Departments, neither of which is organized for effective action.

No amount of coordination by new agencies can overcome this weakness. Before the defense program gets under way the Administration should call to its aid men of experience and stature—men without political ambitions or a willingness to indulge in petty bickering—to head the Navy and War Departments. Nor is it reasonable in a period like this to leave the Department of Commerce in a state of confusion while Secretary Hopkins seeks to regain his health.

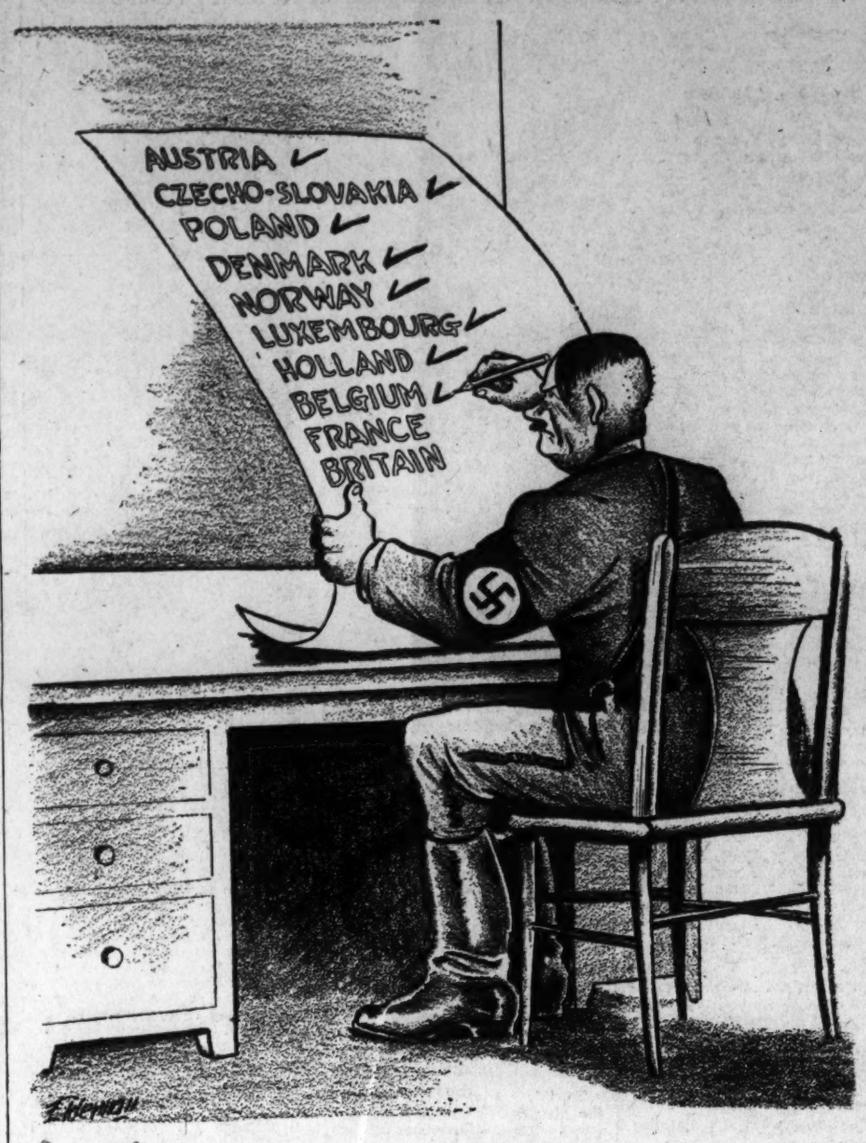
Because a girl says she wouldn't marry the best man in the world is no indication that she will not marry. There are lots of other men.

Consideration

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

We write at least one piece along about this time of year suggesting that radio listeners cut down the volume on their receivers. We do this because doors and windows are open in warm weather, and hence it may happen that the family at the end of the block has to listen to the program you have tuned in whether it wants to or not. No one considers this sort of thing nice, and few people inflict their choice of broadcasts on everyone else within half a mile or so if they are reminded to be thoughtful about it.

The Check-Off



Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

A French Plea

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the earnest request of a French friend, I am sending a translation, abbreviated of her letter, written in the midst of the recent fighting in eastern France.

I hope you will be able to print this, as you have other letters from France, or friends of France, so as to express the desires of those who cannot speak for themselves in their hours of anguish.

FRANCES VAN DYNE.

Chevy Chase, May 24.

(The translation follows):

From hour to hour news comes of the terrible battle raging in Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, and now in France—and I write this letter to beg of you to send us help, not your men, but airplanes, cannons, shells—and to send them the most quickly possible.

I wish that you in America could feel and realize that it is your ideal and your faith that our soldiers are defending along the Meuse under a rain of fire and steel.

Our men offer their lives, we all have someone at the front, or ready to be sent—and we hope you will not know the anguish that is ours, as you did in '17-'18. But if England and France weaken, you will be obliged to fight for your own safety.

We pray you to send us steel, not sell, but give it to our men, nay, send it to help them win. Then Italy, who still hesitates, perhaps for only a few days yet, will return to wisdom—for you are a great and powerful Nation.

I, a private citizen of France, would not send this letter, but the United States, thank God, like France and England, is a country where the opinion of the people is free and important—and I know that I express the thought of all French and English people, at the front and behind the lines, waiting and hoping with all their strength.

JOSETTE DUROUX.

Europe's Children!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Healthy, happy children are God's greatest gift to the world. Man's chief duty is to guard and cherish that gift. Yet, we in the United States remain smugly silent while hordes of little ones are caught in the vortex of Armageddon!

Women of America should demand that our Government set machinery in motion for quick and orderly removal of at least some of these children from Europe. The expense involved can be met by foreign gold now crowded into American bank vaults. United States Army transports could bring the children safely across to these shores, where mobilized personnel from Red Cross, religious and welfare organizations would help in the efficient and systematic disembarkation, and placement in homes and properly established camps, the children to remain in this country for the duration of the war.

Mass Production Of Planes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When action is urgently needed, simple, precise plans should be formulated by sane men and not by so-called experts because today the tempo of the world has been changing too fast for the prophets of 1918 to become the saviors of 1940. There should be no time wasted on quasi-political speeches dealing with the danger of foreign entanglement.

History is written today, not by masters of industry, nor by the tycoons of business, but by a handful of men who, by their iron will and determination, have overcome all obstacles by any means and have outwitted and defeated every master of the old order in every one of their moves in the economic, diplomatic and military fields.

The former corporal of the World War days has certainly shown more wisdom in his action in procuring the services of a former war pilot and others than the democracies in trusting their very life to a group of noisy, incapable politicians.

I still remember that the most successful pilots in the World War were men from all walks of life with very little or no military training. Their training was rather an abbreviated lesson in fundamentals. I have met in my Army days many men who had a minimum amount of hours of training and made fine pilots. The equipment provided for our training by our Government and thoughtful Allies was below anything that should have been expected for the enormous expenditures. Our war planes were, on the whole, as poor as the training but in spite of enormous handicaps caused by graft and inefficiency, our Air Corps was more than successful, due to the spirit which moved its pilots as well as its enlisted personnel.

As soon as the President asked for an air force of 50,000 planes, we read in our press that our "brass hats" can not see any way possible for us to put into the air more than 10,000 planes. If this had ever happened in a totalitarian nation, there is no doubt they would have very soon had in these responsible positions men who could produce the required number of planes requested by the commander in chief.

The air force can be offensive as well as defensive, therefore I can readily see that various types of planes will have to be constructed; but from the records of our highly efficient air researches as conducted at Dayton, supplemented by the confidential information from our air attaches in the warring nations and also from plain deduction, we should be able to concentrate in the selection of the best planes for such work as long range bombers, medium bombers, light bombers, observations, transport, interceptors and pursuit. It is a well known fact in America that mass production has always been the answer to reduce the high cost of manufacturing. We have a vivid example in the expansion of our automobile industry. Experimental work and construction of jigs might be costly but the ingenuity of the American engineers and craftsmen has always overcome these handicaps. Once this selection of type is made, construction should be awarded to responsible firms to manufacture these planes by production methods.

The aim of our Army and Navy air schools should not be to turn out college professors to teach aerodynamics, but to produce air experience so in case of need, they could save their skin as well as their equipment. So let us simplify this teaching of technicalities and put more emphasis on good flying. Do not waste money in training men in power gliders but give them more hours in combat school and less hours in school rooms, and it would also be well to remember that a college degree does not always give the man a better chance to be a good pilot.

PIERRE ABEILLE.

Washington, May 23.

Origins Of The War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The danger that we have feared so much is now here—that the United States may be led into the war. And this danger is brought on by the hysterical reaction of those pledged to keep us out. And why are they hysterical? Because the Allies are having some reverses!

But were not these reverses a possibility in September, 1939, when the President pledged to keep us out? He did not say "as long as the Allies are winning."

Why are "we" so interested in the Allies? If Italy joins them, will we love her too? Will we then regard Mussolini as a good fellow who seeks to "reestablish international law and order"—to use Secretary Hull's moralizing words?

Are England and France fighting against domination of the other countries of Europe? Then why did they arm Hitler, knowing that his stated program (Mein Kampf) included conquest of other countries? The answer is clear to all who are not blinded by propaganda: They armed and connived with Hitler because his main aim was the destruction of Soviet Russia.

But Soviet Russia foiled this long-prepared plan by building an army three times the size of Hitler's. That is why Hitler decided, on August 24, 1939, not to attack Soviet Russia. And that is why, one week later, England and France declared war on Hitler. He had become their enemy overnight by changing his plan. They now knew that anything further that Hitler took would not be used against Soviet Russia, but sooner or later against themselves and their interests.

England and France are therefore not fighting German fascism. If they can reduce Germany's strength to a point where Germany will not be threatening England's empire, the present war will come to a close.

We should have no part of this struggle between the rival rulers of Europe. If Soviet Russia, near the conflict and in constant danger from both belligerents, can stay neutral, the United States, in a different hemisphere, certainly can. By building her defenses, as Soviet Russia has done, the United States can make herself even more impregnable than Soviet Russia.

Questions Leaders

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American unity is beyond achievement under present conditions. In order to have loyalty among the American citizens, we must, first of all, have loyal leaders. A true citizen has respect for and spontaneously accepts obedience to duly constituted authority and the laws of the land.

Since, however, the leaders of our Nation who are charged with the administration of the laws constantly endeavor and openly circumvent the implications thereof, then how can it be expected for the citizens to have respect for either laws or authorities. I have reference in particular to the actions of our pro Allied Administration in circumventing the provisions of the Neutrality Act for the purpose of aiding the Allies, for exmaple, making "wash sale transfers" of our merchant ships.

In order to bring about American unity, the leaders must set the pace. Those who are pro-Allied to the point of becoming openly aggressive in action are just as much fifth columnist as those who are now so labeled because they are pro-Nazi to a similar degree.

The Post Impressionist

Former Actor

From North Baddesley, England, comes this Associated Press dispatch: "Inhabitants of this Hampshire village ran out with shotguns, scythes and clubs last night when an airplane landed in a nearby field. The flier proved to be a former motion picture actor, Ralph Richardson, whose British navy plane had been forced down by engine trouble."

Within the past year I've seen Ralph Richardson as the bibulous idealist in "The Citadel," as the bibulous realist in "The Divorce of Lady X," as the grief-haunted squire in "South Riding," and as the debonair secret agent in "The Lion Has Wings." Whatever other pretensions these films may have had, each of them has a permanent claim to distinction by virtue of his performance. I hadn't known he was enlisted in the Royal Air Force. That isn't what's shocking, though. The shocking thing is to have him referred to as a former motion picture actor. I have no doubt that as an aviator Ralph Richardson is a good one; if he's half as good an aviator as he is an actor, then he's one of the best.

That, however, is not the point. The point is that flying a British navy plane is not Ralph Richardson's business. His business is acting. It happens that his career has been interrupted. Yet this news item would have you think this isn't so. It would have you think his whole life in the theater had been in the nature of an apprenticeship to his service in the air.

This ready acceptance of the abnormal as normal is one of the most insidious and one of the most damaging by-products of war. After the first shock has worn off, after we have accustomed ourselves to a daily program of slaughter and pillage, those of us who are still fortunate enough to be beyond the range of bullets, settle down to watch the spectacle in the same frame of mind we carry to a football game. Driving a salient into a rank of fighting men seems as natural as making an end run. We discuss military maneuvers in about the same way we mull over gridiron strategy.

For every Sunday-morning quarterback we have a dozen week-end commanders in chief. Men become troops, bloodshed a setback, death a loss. Our interest in war mounts, and our horror of warfare abates. Still, as we follow the chess-like play of the armies, concentrating more and more closely on the movements of the pawns, men whom the accounts would describe as former actors, former poets, former accountants, former draper's assistants and former costermongers are having their lives snuffed out.

In one of his pictures Ralph Richardson had this line to say: "Logan's a gentleman. Lippet is not. Lippet is not. Lippet is not!" You had the feeling, listening to him read that line with an insistent rising inflection, that no one else in the world could have said it in quite the same way—as, after hearing the wind sigh, you realize it is a sound only the wind can make. The line falls a good way short of being a deathless morsel of prose, but, after Ralph Richardson had said it, it became a mark to shoot at, a piece of perfection. There are other lines to be spoken by other actors, to be written by other writers, and to be heard and read by men in all walks of life. For every bullet that finds its mark on the battlefields of France and Belgium there will be at least one less line spoken, one less written, one less heard and read and enjoyed.

When we forget that, we have surrendered to the forces of madness and destruction. In the old tales about the youth who went out to slay the dragon two things were always clear: The dragon never looked anything else but a dragon and the youth was never so recognizable as a man as when he closed in combat with the beast. In the fables he never turned into a dragon, for that would have made his victory an empty, meaningless thing. The minute we begin to think of men in terms of cannon-fodder the difference between us and those who use men as cannon-fodder is merely a difference in degree, and our victory over them is not a tribute to our spirit but an evidence of our might.

If plays like "What Price Glory" stirred our noblest resolutions more effectively than the bombing of Liege, then we might better never have seen the plays. If, in the years to come, we turn to read the successor to "All Quiet on the Western Front" and recall that the taking of Sedan merely sharpened our interest in tactics, then we should have the decency to lay that book down unread.

JOHN C. HANLEY.

Would Send Planes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At last the people of the United States are waking up to the peril that threatens. But they are not sufficiently awake yet, after too long a period of "the war is no concern of ours." The neutrality enthusiasts are discovering that there can be no neutrality for us if we want peace and freedom. It is a pity that the plain evidence of the ruthless ambition of the German dictator and his satellites was not comprehended long ago when appeasement was the program of the British government.

If we would save perhaps millions of lives and billions of dollars that our country could use to better purpose, we should be, at this present moment, doing our utmost to that end. We may be sure that a Germany that has conquered Britain and France would quickly turn its attention to the richest prize of all.

Whatever we may think of the Allies, they do represent and are fighting for the civilization we know and prefer. We should act at once—purely in our own interest, if no more.

The greatest advantage the German armies have is their superiority in the air. We have an air service that we think is at least the equal of any, man for man and ship for ship. If we were alive to the necessity our people would demand that we immediately send every fighting squadron we have to help overcome this German superiority in the air.

Letter To Il Duce

By Dorothy Thompson

What America Thinks Of It

DUCE: Before you take your nation into this war, think well and long concerning the United States of America.

We are an odd people, Duce. Our democracy may seem to you sprawling and uncompact, composed of all the peoples of Europe, divided in its opinions, quarreling among ourselves as often over trivial as over important matters.

But that is only one America. The other America is the America that flies together in an emergency; that, being slow to anger, is terrible in wrath; that, detesting imposed discipline, can impose it upon itself; that, being individual, can be, briefly or for long, united in gregarious self-discipline.

We are a Nation of sportsmen. On Saturday afternoons 40 or 50 million Americans go to ball games. We love a fair game. We are a peace-loving Nation, Duce, but we have fought plenty of wars.

ALTHOUGH we detest aggression—particularly the aggression of the strong against the weak—we despise the vulture who strikes down the wounded, who waits until his prey is locked in a life and death struggle and then falls upon him from behind.

We are an idealistic Nation, Duce. In us is still a crusading and evangelistic spirit. Not dead in us, Duce, is a sense of historic mission, a chivalric impulse, a sympathy for the underdog—a sympathy which our strength allows us to indulge.

For we are very strong, Duce. We are stronger than you know; stronger, even, than we know. From Italy, Germany looks mighty to you. You see her great industries, her imposing furnaces, mills, factories, storehouses, turning out and hoarding for these many years airplanes, and tanks, and explosives, and great guns.

These do not impress us, Duce. The potential industrial power, the backbone of modern warfare, is not in Germany. It is in the United States. That potential of power is five times that of all Europe combined. We have at this moment the capacity to produce 8,000,000 automobiles, in factories running only on day shifts; our tractor production runs into millions; and motorized equipment and tanks are only automobiles and trucks with tin hats on. We can produce more steel than all of Europe combined; we are a land built of skyscrapers and steel construction; our workers know how to handle steel, and their numbers are legion.

WE HAVE no desire to turn the instruments of peace into death-dealing instruments, but if we choose to do so, then beware! If 50,000 planes a year are not enough we can double the number. We could swarm the seas with torpedo and mosquito boats. Our resources will not run out. They are within our borders. They are in our own hands.

Do not be deceived, Duce, by what is termed "public opinion." Ours is a genuine public opinion, and moves with and responds to events. Did you observe that defense vote in the Senate, Duce? Can you recall another time the Senate of the United States has passed a unanimous vote, 78 to 0?

DUCE, you have spoken of Roman pride. It is no mean or empty word. Yours are a great people, skillful, lucid, intelligent and brave. Brave, Duce, in a cause in which they believe. The world has said of them that they desert alliances, and that, no doubt, has rankled in your mind. The world also has said that they wait to choose the winning side.

Proudest is the nation that chooses what is right, in harmony with its own instincts. Your people, Duce, do not want this war. Let a stranger who has been briefly in your country tell you what you yourself must know. They do not believe in this war. They believe in neither side, though their spontaneous sympathy goes out to France. But not to Germany, Duce, no more than to England.

Their instinct tells them that Italy will not win this war for Italy, if she goes into it, but she may lose it for Europe—for the Europe which Italy cradled and of which she is an indissoluble part.

YOUR PEOPLE have good instincts, Duce. A fortnight ago, in Italy, when for a moment it seemed as though a detente had occurred and Italy would stand aloof, your people were wreathed in smiles and expressed their joy even to the casual traveling stranger. A leader is great insofar as he expresses and incorporates the instincts of his people. When he runs athwart them his star is lost.

You said some days ago, "Italy cannot stand permanently aloof from the vicissitudes of Europe."

MUSSOLINI

His decision, says Miss Thompson, will help us to make ours world. Do you think that the United States of America can stand aloof from the vicissitudes of the world? This continent, lying between two oceans; these 48 entities looking westward, looking eastward, vast and free? Do you think that the United States will live in this world on the terms of any power or combination of powers?

We, too, Duce, shall help write those terms, or we shall oppose those terms.

And when we oppose them it will not be we who will be exhausted by wars, or short of materials. Not we. And we shall have no sympathy for the vulture, for the profiteer on the misfortunes of others.

CONTEMPT, DUCE is more poisonous than anger. It smites casually and surely. And nations recognize it and feel it themselves. Even in moments of power they know self-contempt. There is such a thing as national remorse. No one lives great in history who creates in his people a feeling of remorse instead of pride. You have read history, Duce, and you know that this is true.

Duce, your industrialists do not want this war. Your peasants do not want this war. The women of Italy do not want this war. Only a part of your youth wants it, now, before it has begun, when you can sway them with your magnetism. But if this war becomes worldwide and is long, there will be consequences for your youth and for your nation which you, too, in the watches of the night, must have thought about and turned, troubled, on your pillow.

Remember that when you make your decision you will also be helping to make ours.

Duce!

Mike's Troubles

MIKE CARROZZO, a more or less Americanized labor racketeer and gunman from Italy, has been having difficulties with the city administration of Chicago and with the United States Government. Inasmuch as the city administration is a partner of the criminal underworld and notoriously corrupt, Carrozzo's problem on that front is not serious, involving at worst a little loss and some inopportune publicity. The Federal Government, however, has been investigating his income, which is vast and, in line with Thurman Arnold's antitrust prosecutions against union racketeers, has been delving into an arrangement, or coincidence, whereby premixed concrete has been barred from use in public paving jobs in Chicago to the taxpayers' great loss and to the corresponding gain of persons and firms openly or covertly interested in the manufacture and sale of other paving materials.

Exasperated by the failure of a strike of paving workers which he ordered several weeks ago and presently called off, Carrozzo recently emerged from un unsatisfactory conference with the commissioner of public works with the exclamation that what this country needed was a Hitler or a Mussolini.

It would flatter Carrozzo to describe him as a parachutist or transmission belt of the Fascists who are using pressure on Americans of Italian birth or descent, for he is a common Chicago unioneer of the strong-arm type, like George Browne, the president of the stagehands and movie employees' racket, and has traits in common with Willie Bioff and George Scalise.

AS A DICTATOR he would admire the methods of the Fuehrer and the Duce, which are not dissimilar from his own, but his indorsement of these rulers points up a problem of labor relations now that the Nation is entering a period of emergency.

In these circumstances the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. will have to decide whether they are content to be represented by the Mike Carrozzos and to take the responsibility for their actions. The A. F. of L. has expressed its opposition to Communism and Josef Stalin, but Carrozzo's indorsement of Hitler and Mussolini is new and by no means frivolous business.

Carrozzo has grown rich as boss of almost all the cement and paving workers and common laborers in Chicago and is the owner of a 900-acre farm and much thoroughbred stock and an expensive country estate. He frequents the luxury of the Miamis in winter, when the criminal scum of the union rackets and the underworld is there, and is influential, if not exactly respected, in the higher councils of the American Federation of Labor.

Mike's career goes back to the old Twenty-second street vice district of Chicago, where he was an associate of the late Jim Colisimo, the Italian Black Hander who introduced efficiency and chain-store methods into the brothel business and imported Al Capone from New York. Carrozzo was indicted for murder in his early days as a labor racketeer, the victim being Mossy Enright, a primitive gorilla of the union racket, but the State somehow, after long delay, was unable to present certain witnesses and Carrozzo was not tried or even arraigned. Big Tim Murphy, Carrozzo's friend and his codefendent in the murder case, had organized the gashouse workers, street sweepers and common laborers, and Enright, a famous gunman of the time, tried to muscle in.

It was Murphy who put Carrozzo into the union racket, and Carrozzo went on to greatness while Murphy went to prison for a mail robbery and later to his grave, the victim of a gang assassination.

ONCE CARROZZO was arrested for carrying a gun and after some delay presented a game warden's credentials to justify his possession of the gun, and explained that he was about to enter a restaurant to measure some fish for size, in discharge of his official duties. Adding insult to injury, he presented pay checks for this duty from the State treasury.

The unions of which Carrozzo is boss are locals of the Common Laborers' Union of the A. F. of L., one of the worst unions in the country, composed largely of ignorant Italian immigrants who are easy victims of the Mafia and padrone type of terrorism and extortion. The union is mysterious and secretive, and under the A. F. of L.'s practice of autonomy, the rank and file members are shut off from assistance from the national federation and left at the mercy of local racketeers. The permit system is commonly used, whereby men in the lowest scale of labor are required to pay a tribute to the racket for the right to work a few days, but do not become union members, and thus do not obtain even a theoretical right to vote.

Carrozzo entered the United States in 1909, made and withdrew, for reasons best known to himself, two applications for naturalization and finally, only three years ago, obtained citizenship in the country many of whose native and naturalized workmen he had bossed as union dictator for many years.

Carrozzo's preference for the type of government represented by Hitler and Mussolini, notwithstanding his belated naturalization, is verified by witnesses.

SIDNEY HILLMAN

Roosevelt's Record

By Ernest K. Lindley

As It Applies To National Defense

THE PRESIDENT'S fireside talk was, in large part, a reply to the charges that he has neglected the national defense. As his figures showed, the national defense has been strengthened immensely under his administration.

When he took office all branches of the service were suffering from acute malnutrition, caused by the penny-pinching of the Coolidge and Hoover regimes.

The Navy has been brought up to an all-time peak in power and efficiency. And every few days another new ship is being launched.

The air arms are small, but A-1 in quality, and the ground-work has been laid for their rapid expansion.

The ground forces lag, but even now they are at an all-time peace time high in strength and efficiency, and through educational orders there has been a little industrial preparation for the demands of war.

But the atmosphere crackles with the cries of those who claim to have recognized long ago that the national defenses were being neglected. On various specific points any number of critics are entitled to say "I told you so." Hugh Johnson, for example, recalls that seven years ago he put into the NIRA the specific authorization to spend part of the original $3,000,000,000 public works appropriation on the mechanization and motorization of the Army. This was pretty far-seeing for a cavalryman. Johnson deserves credit for it. But the record does not disclose that Johnson's foresight extended to the air, where the war has shown our most imperative needs to be.

The President diverted a considerable part of that original $3,000,000,000 sum to national defense. He put most of it into the Navy, which is not only our first line of defense, but requires longer to build up than the ground forces.

THE PRESIDENT has been accused of excessive Navy-mindedness. He has been accused of going along too easily with the orthodox and perhaps antiquated views of the dominant cliques in both the Navy and the Army. This attack comes, of course, from the champions and prophets of aviation.

It can be fairly asserted that the President was conservative in his attitude toward the air arms. But the record shows that he grasped the importance of air power sooner than most of his current critics. Since Great Britain and France bowed to Hitler at Munich, the President has been the spearhead of the drive for greater air power. He has been ahead not only of the top men in the Army and Navy, but of the top men in the air arms of both those services.

In the fall of 1938, when Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, was calling, with the President's approval, for the trebling of our air forces, and New Dealers were talking of combined air forces of from 15,000 to 25,000 planes, they were accused of warmongering and plain craziness. Both the Army and the Navy poured cold water on the grandiose ideas of the President and his New Deal advisers. Even their air arms, where long training and quality have been emphasized, shrank from proposals for rapid expansion.

There were good reasons for not plunging at once into mass production of planes. The designs which could have been standardized then are now out of date. While improvements are still being made, and will continue to be, in some respects they are not likely to come as rapidly as they have during the last few years. Now that planes are exceeding 400 miles per hour, the air is flowing past some of their parts at a speed greater than that of sound. At this point new principles of aerodynamics seem to enter. To discover and test them the Government is now building a new wind tunnel which will create winds up to 1,000 miles per hour. Meanwhile, the practical maximum of speed seems to have been approached, if it has not been reached.

Our newest designs for most types of planes are considered equal or superior to the best of any other nation. It may now be possible to go in for mass production with confidence that our planes will not be swiftly outmoded.

WITH REGARD to pilot training, which is one of the main difficulties of rapid expansion, the President and some of the civilian air officials have shown more originality than the armed services. It was Robert H. Hinckley, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, who saw the immense potentialities of giving elementary pilot-training to college students. Some 10,000 will receive their private pilot's licenses this year, and some of these will go on to advanced training. The President backed Hinckley's program. The armed services only now are beginning to take it seriously.

There have been blind spots in the President's outlook on national defense. Until now he has never given full support to the Army's request, heartily backed by Secretary of War Woodring, that we lay in ample stocks of strategical and critical raw materials—materials vital to war which cannot be obtained in the United States. He probably underestimated the ability of aircraft to damage surface vessels—which is all the more surprising because we have a bomb-sight far superior to any other. The experts say we can hit from 15,000 and 18,000 feet—above the reach of anti-aircraft guns—targets the size of ships which the bombers of other nations cannot count on hitting from altitudes above 2,000 or 3,000 feet. While this bomb-sight is still our secret, we have no assurance that its mechanism will not be divined and duplicated by other nations almost any day.

The President can be assailed by any number of critics who saw sooner or more clearly our national defense needs along specific lines. But there are few who can claim to have seen the picture as a whole earlier or any better than he did. Among the Republican politicians who are now berating him there are none.

The Vassar Girl

OLD MATTHEW VASSAR started something when, on the eve of the Civil War, he turned over half his fortune to found a college for women. There were other female seminaries in 1861 but none offering instruction on a par with the best men's colleges. Moreover, the Poughkeepsie brewer was an early believer in advertising, and through his paid notices in the Boston Christian Witness and the Watchman, in the New York Evangelist, the Chicago Christian Times and the Albany Country Gentleman he spread his gospel far and wide. The progress of his institution is entertainingly illustrated in Marian Bacon's "Life at Vassar: Seventy-five Years in Pictures" (Vassar Cooperative Bookshop, $2.50); its product is more soberly studied in Agnes Rogers' "Vassar Women: An Informal Study" (Vassar College, $2.50).

Vassar opened in 1865, thanks to Matthew Vassar's advertising, with 53 students, and 22 of the 36 States then in the Union were represented; one girl came from Hawaii and one from California, despite the fact that there was no transcontinental railroad at the time. Also, though Vassar opened only five months after Appomattox, six girls came from the South. Vassar was as national a college in 1865 as it is in 1940.

THE GIRLS averaged two inches shorter in 1881, when the first physical measurements were recorded, than today, and ten pounds lighter; what is most indicative of the change in the female half of the nation is the fact that the girls of 60 years ago had an average lung capacity of 117 cubic inches compared with 201 cubic inches today! This fits in with another fascinating detail unearthed by the assiduous Miss Rogers. Inquiries into motives, she says, brought out that in the earlier classes girls went to Vassar because their fathers picked it, whereas post-war graduates usually explain that mother did the deciding. She had more lung power.

It never was true that Vassar girls didn't marry, but more marry today than did when female education was still something of a novelty. More than half married, even in the earliest classes; the marrying figure passed 60 per cent about the turn of the century, 70 per cent before 1910, and is today above 75. But the average number of children per married graduate has remained curiously constant—2.4 for the classes of 1867-'76, 1.9 for the next ten years, 2.1 for the period 1912-'21. And the Vassar divorce rate for the full quarter century has stayed closed to 5 per cent, which seems low.

Another illusion is that Vassar turns out "pinks." Miss Rogers found that 70 per cent of reporting Vassar graduates were soundly Republican. Only eleven in the 7,522 on record recorded themselves as Communists.

BUT THE GIRLS were a sedater group when the great barn that Matthew Vassar built for them (it was modeled after the Tuileries) was opened, amid a surrounding desert of corn and potato fields. They were required to get out of bed at 6 a. m. in those days and to attend chapel before they had breakfast. Every week each girl turned in a synopsis of a sermon to her hall teacher and reported whether or not she had undergone the two tub baths required each week. Miss Bacon recalls that corridor teachers were asked, in those days, to carry students' letters to their rooms "and to notice, so far as they may be able, the extent and apparent character of such correspondents and to report to the Lady Principal." Until well into the present century girls playing men's parts in college plays, while donning men's coats, were required to wear dark skirts instead of trousers; and four weekends a year at West Point was deemed liberalism until after the World War. Now the girls' weekends are their own, and the Alumnae House is used as a sort of week-end dormitory for Yale visitors. There is even a men's dressing room in the gymnasium; visitors like to swim.

Of course, Vassar always had its rebels. A faculty minute of 1871 records the horrible discovery that "5 students have smoked cigarettes, 3 have drank wine, 3 have corresponded with Bisbee students (a military academy in Poughkeepsie), 2 of them with strangers." And Vassar still has its irksome restrictions on undergraduate conduct: the girls are required to wear skirts to dinner (slacks and shorts are accepted in classrooms and at lesser meals), and only seniors are permitted cars at college.

After Leopold's Surrender

THE DISASTROUS effect on Allied fortunes of the sudden surrender of the Belgian army, under orders from King Leopold, can hardly be exaggerated. It is at once a blow of major magnitude to the military position of the Allies and to their morale. And by weakening them at an extremely critical moment it may increase the number of their enemies.

Until this blow fell the plight of the Allied armies of the north was critical, but not necessarily hopeless. The German pincers movement from the east and the south had isolated that large force from the main Allied armies along the Somme. Bit by bit the ring was growing tighter. In the meantime, with the fall of Boulogne, the penetration by German forces of Calais and the daily bombardment by Nazi planes of Dunkirk and Ostend, the possibility of escape by sea of any large portion of this trapped force became steadily more remote.

Nonetheless, there remained the hope that the main French forces south of the German-held corridor from Sedan to the channel might break through and thus not only unite the divided Allied armies but also surround a large and important German force. But even if this did not happen, every day that the northern Allied army fought on gave Gen. Weygand another day to reform his lines, bring up reinforcements and make all the careful preparations necessary for whatever strategy he might decide to pursue.

IT IS A fundamental axiom of military theory that wars are not won until the enemy army is either physically or psychologically incapable of continuing the fight. Thus Holland was lost when the Dutch army, after a gallant fight in which one Dutch soldier in four had been killed, decided that it could continue the struggle no longer. Belgium was lost when King Leopold decided to throw in the sponge.

The reasons that prompted him to order the surrender the forces of which he was commander-in-chief are not important at the moment. It may have been desperation; it may have been some psychological quirk in the character of this son of King Albert; it may have been some other reason. The facts are obscure. The important thing at this time, however, is that the Belgian army which had fought bravely and well was ordered to lay down its arms.

What this means is easy to imagine. British and French forces which had been fighting side by side with the Belgians along the northern front now find themselves doubly weakened. They are weakened because they have lost the support of a least 300,000 troops and because the German forces needed to fight the Belgians can now be employed against the British and the French. The loss, in a very short time of the remaining channel ports still in Allied hands, is now indicated. They are also weakened because the capitulation of the Belgian army under King Leopold compels the French army along the Somme to fight under suddenly changed conditions. For the second time since the disaster at Sedan, the tactics and strategy of the Allies and particularly of the French forces have to be rapidly changed.

IT IS A TRAGIC circumstance that had the British and French forces now trapped in Flanders been kept along the Little Maginot Line the German breakthrough at Sedan might not have occurred. It was at least partly because the French right wing in the vicinity of the Meuse and the Ardennes had been weakened to strengthen the Allied armies in Belgium that the Germans were able to penetrate the French defenses along the Belgium frontier and utterly destroy their usefulness as, previously, the usefulness of the Maginot Line itself had been destroyed by the German thrust into Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

In the meantime, Gen. Weygand is reported as preparing a "now or never" offensive to rescue the British and French forces surrounded by the enveloping German armies. What the results of this offensive will be we shall know before long. In the meantime, it is well to remember that as long as the French army is an army in being the question of victory or defeat remains in abeyance. To win, Germany must smash that army. As long as that army is physically and psychologically unbroken the war will go on.

It has been predicted, however, that once in possession of the Channel ports Hitler will let France alone and concentrate the force of the German attack solely on England. But even under existing circumstances an attack on England would probably prove no easy venture and would certainly involve a vast German expenditure of men and materiel. Indeed, an attack on England, whether in the form of actual invasion or continuous bombardment from the air, would have no purpose if it did not lead to the weakening of the French army by cutting off essential supplies and reinforcements from Great Britain to France.

In that connection it is obviously in the German interest to have the British thoroughly alarmed over the possibility of an invasion and thus allocate to home defense men and supplies needed by the Allied forces on the continent. But whatever happens in England the war will probably be won—and lost—in France.

The Young Grads

"John, we have to decide about these graduation presents."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, there's Clarence . . . and Buddy . . . and Barbara . . ."

"Don't tell me they're through school!"

"Of course. Here are the commencement invitations, and you know their parents would never forgive us——"

"Oh, well, get them some little things——"

"Such as?"

"Well, get the boys some billfolds. That's what I got——"

"They already have billfolds. They've had them for years."

"All right, give them pen and pencil sets."

"You make me laugh. They've had them since they were in kindergarten."

"I tell you—give 'em socks and handkerchiefs. Something practical."

"They have more of those than they can use now."

"Well, you might spend a little more then and get them some belts, with silver monogram buckles——"

"They had those in grade school."

"Well, maybe they'd like sweaters——"

"They have more than they can wear now. Besides, they're so particular——"

"Well, there's books. Give 'em a good book apiece."

"They would be simply furious. Nobody gives books any more."

"How do you know?"

"I heard the kids say so themselves."

"Well, just what do they want, then?"

"The chief thing they all want is a roadster."

"What?"

"Yes, both the boys want maroon roadsters——"

"Do you think I'm John D. Rockefeller?"

"No, I don't. But I was just telling you what they wanted—to show how their tastes ran."

"Well, if they're going to be so highfalutin' I suppose we could get them some little bedside radios——"

"They've had those for ages. They want television sets."

"Oh, they do, do they! Do you expect me——"

"No, of course not. But the whole thing is we have to spend more than we thought."

"What do you suggest?"

"Well, I did hear Clarence say he'd like a new movie camera. His is getting old. And Buddy wants a portable typewriter——"

"Say, who do you think I am?"

"Well, we don't want to look cheap among the other relations. And, of course, we'll have to get something for Barbara——"

"I suppose she wants a house and lot."

"No she wants a blue roadster——"

"Of all the——"

"Wait a minute. I had thought of getting her a new wrist watch, but she already has three and so I've been talking with her mother——"

"What'll she compromise on? A Caribbean cruise?"

"No, but a new evening dress, for one thing——"

"Say, I was glad to get a necktie when I graduated."

"I know. And I was thrilled over a pair of stockings. But, of course, times have changed and besides we——"

"I tell you! We were just a couple of boobs!"

Broadway Mildly Tearful Over Marital Woes of Dempseys; Was Third Marriage For Both and Lasted Seven Years

New York, May 28.

THE EASY-WEEPERS of Broadway are sobbing again—this time because Jack Dempsey and his third wife, little Hannah Williams, have busted wide open and separated. This was Hannah's third crack at the holy estate, too, and it appears that two more people have taken the matrimonial third strike and slouched back to the dugout.

ALICE HUGHES

This one lasted nearly seven years. Hannah was a musical comedy cutie who grew noted locally for one song, "Cheerful Little Earful." Dempsey had attained wide popularity—never his when he was heavyweight champion. There was that cruel "slacker" charge during the other war, when Jack had his picture taken in overalls and patent leather shoes. But the newly married seemed very happy, and their Times Square pals said, "This is the real thing." "Alackaday, look now.

Not even their two little girls have been able to keep them harnessed, Jack's previous marriage, to the sultry beauty, Estelle Taylor, produced no offspring. Estelle's pet name for the fighter was "Ginsberg." But something happened, and it's gone boom. Some people call it "incompatibility," which I call mere stuff. If they'd been really incompatible, the marriage wouldn't have run a year. Nope, there's more. Hannah is said to want to go to work professionally, after all these years. Maybe Jack is still a vagabond at heart, too, for he rode the rods when he was a kid fighter. Now he travels everywhere refereeing fights. And his restaurants keep him busy, too. Maybe Hannah's tired of lone, intensive motherhood.

She's still a very flashy item, and undoubtedly likes to get about, and Dempsey is busy. And so another "perfect marriage" explodes in our faces, and sloppy Broadway cries quietly into its bowls of cold borscht.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Talking to Barbara Shermund, who draws those silly flapper-age girls for The New Yorker, about a new picture idea, I asked her how we'd think up the gags for them. "That's easy," said Barbara, "We'll just call in Richard McAllister." It seems this mystery man thinks up lots of the gag captions for that magazine's artists—Arno, Price and the rest buy from him. He submits lists of them—and collects 25 per cent of the artists' take if they sell the pictures.

Barbara's an interesting little girl. Her cartoon characters are dumb-sophisticated and very, pardon me, sexy. But the artist herself is a shy easy-blusher, and when Brother Hall got off a mildly rakish crack at the party the other day, Barbara went tomato red.

Man Exploits Girl's Avowed Love; Repenant, Devoted, But 'Wedded' to Career, He Asks What to Do

DEA MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 24 years old, and this June I will graduate from a well-known law school. I did my undergraduate work at another college, where I graduated three years ago. From here, I will go to one of several cities where I have been offered positions. (One of these offers comes from a town very close to where I am now going to school.)

I have always been wrapped up in law, and never had more than a normal interest in girls or dates—until I met Deb, that is. Deb is just 18 and lives here with an elderly aunt, not far from my apartment. Her family situation is very complicated and unhappy for her. At present, she is finishing her second and last year in a girls' school. She is an unusual and interesting girl, of mature mind, at once sophisticated and naive. She is very popular and goes with a nice but very gay crowd.

I met her when she was dating my roommate, and I was very impressed with her. She seemed to like me and we spent all our time together when we met afterwards at parties or at my apartment. Once I drove up to her school with a friend and had a date with her there. For several weeks after that, she dated both my roommate and me, dividing her dates and attentions between us. Our little "design-for-living" got very involved and, of course, it couldn't last.

Deb never formally chose between us, but began accepting more and more dates from me. She went with me to all the important social events, although I happen to know my roommate asked her to several of them. Eventually we were dating constantly and spending all our free time together. People began to accept us as a couple, although we didn't realize it at the time.

Alone together in my apartment night after night, we made love more than we should have. One night Deb cried and I found to my surprise and pleasure—and dismay—that she is in love with me. I told her as honestly and plainly as I could how I feel: that I am not in love with her or any girl; that I am grown up and at the age where my career means more to me than anything else; but that she does mean a lot to me and I am terribly fond of her.

Then the inevitable happened! I hated myself for it and swore it never would happen again. We even tried not seeing each other for a while, but we were miserable apart. Now we are seeing each other again and in spite of our good intentions and mutual pledges, we haven't been able to resist completely.

Deb was very unhappy about it at first, but says it will not make any difference, because she loves me. I blame myself for the whole affair and will never forgive myself; but I will never feel about this as I would about any other so-called "conquest." I sincerely feel that something finer is involved than just her physical attractiveness or my man's selfishness.

What shall I do, Miss Haworth? Shall I marry her, not being sure of my feelings for her? I may be in love with her now; I don't know. I don't know how to describe the way I feel about her: I like her most of all the girls I know. I'm terribly fond of her. I enjoy being with her and want to be with her all the time. I hate to face the idea of leaving her in a few weeks. Perhaps it is love and I am afraid to face it. Or perhaps I still have my undergraduate ideas of love.

I want—even more than my own happiness—to do what is fair for her. Her happiness is very important to me and I want to protect her all I can. Please tell me what you think of this situation, and what solution there is that would be right for me and happiest for her. Very sincerely,

U. V. A.

Recover Clear Head Before Making Decision

DEAR U. V. A.: Hundreds of variations of this tragic theme have been brought to my attention during the time I have been writing this column—but never before one in which the man has shown the same degree of integrity and perception. It is understandable that the girl would love you, and her defenselessness against her love and your "man's selfishness" is no doubt largely due to her unhappy background, which leaves her at least circumstantially orphaned.

The girl who has been cut off from, or who has never known, the emotional security (the satisfying fullness of affection), that a casually happy, normal family life supplies, stands in great danger of being fortuitously despoiled in her first intense commitment to love. Loving, for woman, is giving. It is difficult, at best, for her to deny her beloved in anything. And when there is added to that selfless predisposition the perilous hunger for emotional sustenance and solace which handicapped this girl in her dealings with you, one can see how greatly she was at Love's mercy,—and at yours; and, also, how deplorable was the momentary blind selfishness with which you pursued your advantage.

However, there is commendable integrity in your immediate reaction of "hating yourself" (because holding yourself to blame), for what happened; and in the girl's valiant determination not to let it make any difference, "because she loves you." This mutual magnanimity, plus your discovery that you want, even more than your own happiness, to do what is "fair and happiest" for the girl, proves indisputably that "something finer is involved than just her physical attractiveness and your selfishness."

Yet, the very sacrificial quality implicit in your hesitant, tentative aspiration to serve her happiness at the expense of your own, suggests that you are not—as yet—"in love" with her. If you were, marriage to her would appeal to you as an imperative personal necessity; as a passport to Paradise; and not as a possible chivalrous duty.

It may be that you will come to feel this way about her, in time. The signs and portents are there—in the profoundly congenial companionship; in your wanting to be with her all the time; in your wretchedness when apart; in your dreading the idea of leaving her in a few weeks; in your desire to "protect her all you can," etc.

Your current negativity in the courtship may be, and probably is, due to the fact that you are too sure of her. It appears to me that there is something of a balance of opposing forces in significant man-woman relationships that is always maintained, consciously or unconsciously. If and when the woman becomes, even fleetingly, the positive force in that delicate balance—through proclaiming her love or soliciting the man's love—the latter involuntarily swings around to the negative position; and you might immediately gross "positive" in your attitude and dimensions, if the girl were to become amiably and elusively indifferent.

Now, we come to the question of what to do, all things considered. The highly fortunate circumstance that you have (as yet) been spared biological penalty for your indiscretion allows rather more freedom of choice than you otherwise have. I believe the girl's tender age and your indecision argue in favor of "tabling" any marriage plans.

When you are apart from each other for a while, your respective hearts and heads will begin to "make sense" about the situation, in a way they cannot do now, due to propinquity in the artificial hothouse atmosphere of the college campus. In the meantime, if you would do "what is right for yourself and happiest for her," discipline your emotions to the point where you no longer make the slightest unworthy demand of her love; even to the point where you can assist her in recovering her own reserve without wounding her heart. In so doing you will have recovered the ethical right to say, in all sincerity, that it is for her sake that you want to wait for separation and a clear head before making any final decision about the relationship. Because I think it would be better not to marry her than to marry her now from a sense of duty.

Golden Breadstuff

With New Flavor, Definite Appeal

THE WEATHER is in an indecisive mood right now. It roars and baas and sends plenty of sharp wind and patters of rain. But whatever the mood outside, a definite promise of spring can come from the kitchen in the form of Quick Orange Bread. Sliced thin, toasted and buttered while hot, the bread is a becoming companion for breakfast coffee, luncheon or tea. Try the following recipe when you want a breadstuff with new appeal.

Quick Orange Bread

Sift 3 cups sifted soft wheat flour together with 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Beat 2 eggs well, and add ½ cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons melted shortening and orange mixture. Combine the the egg mixture with dry ingredients. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven, 350 degrees for about 1 hour.

Orange Mixture—Simmer outer rinds of 2 large oranges in hot water for 10 minutes. Drain, cover with water and cook until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain and chop very fine. Add ½ cup water and ½ cup sugar and cook slowly until a thick sirup is formed and the rinds have become semi-transparent. Cool.

Beware 'Edginess' From Hunger When On A Reducing Diet

Should Ease Into Food Program, Also Go Slow on Exercises in Order to Avoid Strain and Stiffness

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN you finally make up your mind to go on a slimming program, you fully expect the worst: To lose your good disposition, to be hungry most of the time, and to be stiff as a board from the suppling exercise!

Well, you're expecting too much! You will be hungry—but only for the first few days. At first you may imagine you are starving. But those are only the hunger pangs of a pampered appetite, not signs of starvation. But after a few days on less food, the appetite adapts itself because the stomach shrinks and you are actually satisfied with much less food.

If you need something to tide you over between low calorie meals, take fruit or a glass of skim milk in the mid-morning and a cup of hot bouillon or hot tea in the afternoon.

Ease Into Program

As for crippling yourself with exercise, that's foolish! When you are not used to exercising, you should ease into your program. Exercise sets you up and you get the idea there is no limit to what you can do. So you may go at it too strenuously and for too long. You don't feel stiff right away. It takes about three days for your muscles to register the full effect and by then the damage is done. It will be many a day before you exercise again—if ever!

You should start with just five minutes' exercise daily for the first week. After that, increase the stint a minute or two each day until you are exercising for about 20 minutes. Make each movement slowly and accurately and between exercises shake the tension out of your muscles and relax completely. This helps to prevent soreness. Then follow with a warm bath. If you wish a further precaution, toss in a generous supply of epsom salts.

Avoid Being Edgy

But, above all, your reducing diet should not make you edgy! On a good reducing diet the protective elements—which protect your nervous system—are included in normal amounts.

The scientists have made dieting foolproof. By including a normal amount of protein, minerals and vitamins in the daily menu and cutting down on the high calorie fats and carbohydrates, you can lose weight without affecting your disposition and the valid reason is that you are not putting a strain on your vitality.

Your disposition is a fairly accurate gauge of your well-being, and the diet that protects your disposition protects your health.

Social Pace Continues Despite War But Talk Turns to Strife Abroad

Entertainment in Keeping With Capital's Serious Tenseness Over European Conflict, Despite Gay, Notable Setting for Event

By Hope Ridings Miller.

NO MATTER what happens in Europe, Washington society seems to go blithly along at its usual "little season's pace." Yet there is a difference. You can sense it in the tea table talk, the serious manner, in which even the largest parties are conducted, and a subtle tenseness that pervades any get-together.

Hope Ridings Miller

Yesterday, for example, when the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Joseph Davies entertained at tea, talk turned continuously on the war. Nobody discussed anything else, apparently nobody thought of much else. Yet, as parties go, that one had everything—a distinguished company, a lovely setting and a hostess who looked as if she had stepped from a picture frame.

The Ryan home at 1700 Foxhall road, which Mr. and Mrs. Davies have leased, is one of the prettiest in Washington. The spacious rooms on the entire first floor were thrown open for the party, but most of the guests lingered on the terrace, where the hostess received and where drinks were poured steadily from 5 until 7 o'clock.

MRS. DAVIES was smartly turned out in a floor length garden frock of brown marquisette trimmed powder in blue lace and fashioned with short sleeves and flaring skirt. Her picture hat of brown horsehair was accented with blue velvet ribbon. She carried a corsage of white orchids.

The table in the dining room was lavishly laden with the usual tea time dainties. Worthy of special note was the gold coffee service at one end of the table. Guests who came into the dining room also had an opportunity to see some of the china that once belonged to Catherine the Great of Russia and was obtained by Mr. and Mrs. Davies when the former was United States Ambassador to Russia. A tall bauquet of white peonies, red roses and bridal wreath centered the tea table and similar bouquets were used throughout the house.

Hostesses assisting included Mrs. Millard Tydings, who wore a frock of black tucked net and a smart wide brimmed white hat trimmed with roses beneath the back of the crown; Mrs. Aldace Walker in a green and white flowered frock; Senhora de Martins, Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. Adolph Berle, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, in a white ensemble; Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Lady Lewis, Mrs. E. Hope Slater and Mrs. Merrall MacNeille, daughter of Mrs. Davies.

GUESTS WERE drawn from diplomatic, official and residential circles. Senators and envoys seemed to be all over the place; and, as would be expected, there were a number from the State Department.

To mention a few diplomats—there were the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil; the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky, the Czecho-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban, Mme. Fotitch and the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza.

Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, whose afternoon partying appearances are few and far between came early and stayed late. Senator Millard Tydings, like the host of the day, Mr. Davies, was here, there and everywhere. Mrs. Sumner Welles arrived with Mrs. Stanley Reed. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson were seen in the crowd, as were Senator Radcliffe, Mrs. Harold Walker, the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Woods Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky, Mrs. Sol Bloom and daughter, Vera Bloom; Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Meem; Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning with their daughter, Miss Barbara Henning, and another daughter, Mrs. Head, who is visiting here from San Antonio; Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley, Mrs. Loy Henderson, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming and Arthur Bradley Campbell escorting his debutante cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, and dozens more.

The event was one of two that Mrs. Davies has planned for this season. She will entertain at a similar fete on Tuesday, June 4.

Later this summer the Misses Meuser will make their bow to society at Newport, R. I., where Mr. Campbell leased the John Jacob Astor house for the season

Marsha Hatch Given Party

Entertaining for a bride-elect, Miss Marsha Hatch, Dr. and Mrs. John H. Martin gave a small punch party yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Martin's parents, Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes. Mrs. Martin, who spends a great deal of time with her parents here, was joined by her husband, Dr. Martin, several days ago. They make their home in Camden, Del.

Miss Hatch's fiance was unable to come down from Providence, R. I., for the party. The daughter of Senator Carl A. Hatch, will be married on June 11. Yesterday she wore a pale blue crepe frock and Mrs. Martin had selected a navy blue ensemble. Mrs. Hughes, who assisted her daughter by pouring, wore a gray crepe gown. Also pouring were Mrs. D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Claude Pepper.

Assisting the young hosts were several Daughters of the Senate. They included Miss Chiyo Thomas, Miss Cuyler Schwartz, Miss Elizabeth Ann Bailey, Miss Agnes Dougherty, Mrs. Lewis Lind and Mrs. Ralph Chase.

W. C. Gallaghers On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Gallagher are on their wedding trip in Virginia, and upon their return will take up residence here. The marriage of the former Miss Margaret A. Lace took place at 9:30 o'clock in the morning in the Blessed Sacrament Church on Thursday, May 23. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Josephine Lace, of Illinois, who came here to attend the wedding.

The bride wore a blue ensemble with white accessories. Her only ornament was a gold locket, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a white prayerbook with sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Attendants at the ceremony were Mrs. William H. Feltman, of Arlington, Va., and John Michael Horstkamp, of this city.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the Highlands for the bridal party and members of the immediate families. Guests from out-of-town were Miss Nora Driscoll, Francis Lace and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Lace, of Illinois. Mr. Gallagher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Gallagher, of this city.

Mackeys Will Give Christening Fete

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Mackey will entertain at a supper party on Saturday evening in their home in Arlington, Va., following the christening of their three children.

The three children, Mary Lou, Beckford and Annaliza, will be christened at 3 o' clock in the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MR. AND MRS. Robert Peil gave a luncheon for 14 people out at Cornwell the other day. At least the luncheon was intended for 14, but one of the guests dropped out at the very last minute. Mrs. Pell, to prevent seating an ominous 13, sent to the nursery and invited her daughter, Margot Leonard, aged six, to fill the extra place.

Miss Margot had already lunched but she sat with infinite patience until the end of the meal. She proved an excellent conversationalist when spoken to, and confided to her neighbor, Walter Lippmann, that when her mother and grandmother go to Bermuda for the summer she would like to precede them in a speedboat with the family police dog to prepare the house for their arrival. "That day I shall order my own lunch," said Margot, "and," casting a sly glance around the table, "I think I shall try some whisky."

• • • •

THE MINISTER of Yugoslavia and Madame Fotitch were the ranking guests at luncheon. Madame Fotitch said that she will go to Rehoboth Beach for the month of June, with the Minister coming down for week-ends. Upon their return the Fotitches will take the Pells' house for the rest of the summer.

Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the Lippmanns, Mrs. Pell's mother, Mrs. Reginald Barker; Constantine Brown and Harold Hinton completed the party.

MR. AND MRS. Arthur Krock went to New York recently to attend the party given for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch on their golden wedding anniversary. The hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Damrosch's daughters and sons-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Littell.

• • • •

DURING THE EVENING Deems Taylor, the famous composer, put on an original and remarkable stunt which had required careful preparation. He walked over and turned on a phonograph, announcing that the guests would hear Mr. Damrosch conduct at his best. The room was filled for some minutes with glorious classical music when suddenly a voice which seemed to be that of Mr. Damrosch himself came out of the phonograph. It said, "I'm tired of this stuff. Let's have some swing." "All right," answered Mr. Taylor, "go ahead."

Some very good jazz now burst forth and continued to the end of the record when the voice said, "I'm tired of lying on my back."

"I'll turn you over," said Mr. Taylor, and obligingly did so. He continued his conversation with the voice in the phonograph from time to time during a program of lovely and varied music. After the finale Mr. Taylor was congratulated on his ingenuity and thanked warmly for the entertainment.

THE HONORABLE Mrs. Heathcoat Amory has gone to England to visit her family. Upon her return she will bring her baby with her to Washington, that important member of the family having been left behind when the Amorys came to America last summer on a pleasure trip. Like a number of others Mr. Amory was drafted to work in the British embassy here to handle the extra work due to the war. The Amorys quickly became popular in the Capital where, among the older generation, Mrs. Amory has found some friends of her grandfather, Lord Howard de Walden.

Supper Honors Lillian Somoza, Local Graduate

The Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle entertained at a buffet supper last evening in honor of Senorita Lillian Somoza, daughter of the President of Nicaragua. The fete was in celebration of Senorita Somoza's graduation from Gunston Hall, and guests included a number of her classmates, as well as many members of the younger diplomatic set.

The long buffet table in the dining room was decorated with white spring blossoms and lighted with towering white candles. White flowers were used throughout the house.

Informality accented the gathering which began at 7:30 p. m. Featured entertainer was a strolling Mexican singer and guitarist, who played during supper and for dancing afterward.

Degree Awarded French Envoy at College Exercises

The French Ambassador, Count de St. Quentin, has returned to Washington from Geneva, N. Y., where he received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Hobart and William Smith College. He delivered a Phi Beta Kappa address at the commencement.

Also awarded an honorary degree was Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., who spent a year in Washington when her husband was president of the United States Chamber of Commerce. She is active in humanitarian work.

Col. Murphy, Wife Visit Relative In Chevy Chase

Lieut. Col. Edward A. Murphy, U. S. A., and his wife, the former Miss Alice Coughlin, of Washington, are visiting the former's sister, Miss Alice E. Murphy, at 18 Grafton street, Chevy Chase, Md.

From here they will go to Philadelphia to visit Mrs. Murphy's brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. Albert Wick, who will accompany them to West Point for the graduation of their son, Edward A. Murphy, jr., from the United States Military Academy. Their other son, John Murphy, is now at Harvard and will join his family at West Point and then return to California where Col. Murphy is assigned to duty at Benicia Arsenal near San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. James S. Naughton, brother-in-law and sister of Col. Murphy, entertained at dinner last evening in their honor and Mrs. Naughton is giving a luncheon on Monday for Mrs. Murphy.

Steinhardt Back From Soviet Post

Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Russia, arrived in New York yesterday on the liner Washington.

Also returning on the ship were the wives of two United States envoys to troubled European countries. They are Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of our Minister to Bulgaria, and Mrs. Leland Harrison, wife of the Minister to Switzerland.

Sunny Skies Smile on Fete Of H. I. Quinns

Daughter Assists At al Fresco Party In Spring Valley

That the Henry I. Quinns "stand in" with the weather man is a fact, for sunny skies smiled on the hosts yesterday afternoon for their party, so the punch bowl was relegated to the garden, just as they had planned.

With their pretty daughter Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. Quinn entertained between 5 and 7 o'clock at their home in Spring Valley. Wearing a tropical flowered print frock, floor length, Mrs. Quinn received her guests. She was assisted by Miss Quinn, who had chosen a smart green and white printed ensemble for the occasion. Peonies in various shades were used throughout the house. Bright red blooms graced the library, while pale pink ones were used in the dining room where tea and cakes were served.

Guests wandered out onto the terrace to look at the really lovely garden and sample the punch. Rows of iris graced the garden intermingled with pansies. The bright rhododendrons and yellow lilies vied for attention.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Wilbur Gray, Mrs. Joseph Burkart, Mrs. Frank Ballou, Mrs. Oscar Albertini and Mrs. John Kirkwood.

Many D.C. Buds Listed in Book

The long-awaited Deputante Register is just off the press. Glorified pictures of girls from all over the country—including many prominent Washingtonians—grace the pages of this publication. Pertinent facts are added to this list of buds who bloomed in '37, '38 and 39.

A de luxe volume, so the release goes, it is luxuriously bound in thickly padded washable white morocco-grain fabrikoid. Lined with silk moire, the cover and backbone are stamped in gold. The book is accompanied by the supplement and index.

Local patronesses for the Debutante Register include Mrs. Lee Benoist, Mrs. John M. Biddle, Mrs. Harry Flood Byrd, Mrs. Henri de Sibour, Mrs. Robert C. Dove, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mrs. Charles De Vere Drayton, Mrs. Guy Henry, Mrs. John Parker Jackson, Mrs. Calvin B. Matthews, Mrs. P. Lee Phillips, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Fugo Rennert, Mrs. Charles Russell, Mrs. Lloyd arker Shippen, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Norman Underwood, Mrs. John R. Williams and Mrs. George Y. Worthington, jr.

Luncheon Fete For Texas Visitor

Mrs. C. Russell Shetterly and Mrs. F. H. Leake will entertain at a small luncheon today in honor of Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, who will leave tomorrow for her home in Texas after spending the winter here.

The guests will include Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown and Mrs. Frank Waring.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

SOMEONE JOKINGLY remarked the other day that when the war began to separate American wives from their husbands, we in this country really began to think it was "serious." Now comes the news that the ladies of our staff at the American Embassy in London are all coming back to this country on the refugee ship, President Roosevelt. When war first broke out, all the wives took a house together in the countryside, where their husbands joined them whenever possible.

Several have little children, who will, of course, accompany their mothers. But the famous English "nannies" are not being allowed to leave the country owing to conscription for home defense.

• • • •

MRS. THEODORE ACHILLES and Mrs. Alan Kirk, both of Washington, are among those returning. The Kirk family has been divided for the past year, father and mother in London, where Capt. Kirk is our Naval Attache, and the two daughters, Marian and Deborah, at school here.

Deborah will fly down from Vassar this week-end to attend the Glover dance on Saturday and will stay with her grandmother, Mrs Frederick Chapin. Marian will graduate next Wednesday from Bryn Mawr, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, will go up for commencement. Marian already has a job at the Public Library here for next year.

• • • •

THE TWO GIRLS, their mother and grandmother, will leave early in July for their summer place at Black Point, Conn. Mrs. Selden Chapin will go to Long Island for a week or two, then place her children in camp and return to spend the summer with Mr. Chapin. He is due for transfer by the State Department in the fall, and Mrs. Chapin says that the way things are in Europe now, this may be her last chance for some time to see anything of him.

THE NATIONAL AIR FORUM expected 1,000 private flyers for its show, but on Monday only 10 had showed up, and some of these came by train! The weather, of course, was responsible.

Roger Wolfe Kahn, bandleading son of the late Otto Kahn, and one of the leading sportsman pilots of the country, is here for the forum. Miss Jacqueline Cochran, leading aviatrix of the country, flew her Seversky to Bolling Field for the events.

Even the switchboard girl at headquarters here of the National Aeronautical Association is a pilot. She is Miss Cecile Hamilton and started flying six years ago in England.

Miss Arleen Davis, of Cleveland, another conventionite, is one of few women to hold a 4-M rating, the highest you can get. This means she is licensed to fly heavy, twin-engined transport planes.

A WASHINGTON DELEGATE is Miss Margot Tanner, a seaplane expert. With Ruth Nichols, she was the guest of a movie company several years ago in a flight all over the country to advertise "Test Pilot." Miss Tanner has also made the China Clipper trip, from California to the Orient.

President of the Ninety-Nines is Delegate Betty Gillies. This group, an international organization of licensed women pilots, was founded by Amelia Earhart. Also here for the Forum is Mrs. Louise Thaden, first woman to win the Bendix Speed Race.

WELL KNOWN WASHINGTON fliers include Mrs. Richard Casey, wife of the Australian Minister; Miss Martha Bacon, daughter of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, who recently obtained a pilot's license, and Miss Marjorie Meuser, who takes her friends up for rides daily. Women are still way behind men in aviation, however.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who won the $1,500 diamond bracelet which was raffled off recently for Finnish relief, has turned it back to be bid for again for the benefit of the Finns.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi entertained at dinner last evening.

Loring Christie, Canadian Minister, is recuperating at Johns Hopkins from an operation.

Mrs. McCook Knox has returned from a stay at White Sulphur Springs, W Va., and a visit to the New York World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Walker, who have been at the Mayflower, have returned to their home in Scranton, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Copley, of Aurora, Ill., are spending several days in Washington at the Mayflower before returning to Coronado, Calif., where they live most of the time. In addition to being the publisher of various newspapers in Illinois, Mr. Copley is now owner of a chain of newspapers published in southern California. He was a member of Congress from 1911 to 1923.

Mrs. Harry Bernton has left for Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., where she and Dr. Bernton have opened their country home for the summer. Dr. Bernton will join her for week-ends. Last week-end they had as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Lester Neuman and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hahn.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Woerner, of New York, recently paid a brief visit to the former's mother, Mrs. Otto Woerner, of Washington.

Fete Set Tonight For Mary Hayden

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Hayden, of East Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, will entertain for their daughter, Mary, at a dance at the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase this evening.

Their guests will include Miss Hayden's classmates at Holy Cross Academy, other young friends and their escorts. Assisting throughout the evening will be Mrs. Joseph A. Phelan, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Grogan, Mr. and Mrs. John J. McPhaul, Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner J. O'Boyle and Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham Rogers.

Committee Urges Friend At Court for Tenants

Unit of Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters Makes Recommendations to Lighten Burden Of Needy Families Who Face Eviction

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A friend at court for the poor tenant was recommended yesterday in a report of a subcommittee of the Department of Government and Economic Welfare, of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, at the league's annual meeting at Vacation Lodge, Cherrydale, Va.

The committee, headed by Mrs. R. H. Randall, presented findings resulting from a study initiated in the early fall, and made recommendations designed to lighten the burden of needy families who face eviction if their rent is not paid promptly when it falls due.

Last October 20, according to the report, 97 cases were filed by 23 real estate agents. Three of these consistently added 25 to 50-cent charges on the legal court fee and one had 18 such overcharges. More than one-fifth of all cases were overcharged by one agent, it was said.

In a majority of cases, tenants were sued within 20 days of the date when the rent fell due and one-fifth were sued within from two to ten days. These cases were for rent due 30 days in advance. Court records showed one eviction in every 200 cases.

The court disposed of about 4,000 cases a month, handling them at the rate of approximately four a minute. In some of the cases the rent was not paid because it came due just before pay day when there was no money left. Tenants, in some instances, were called into court eight or ten times a year and costs amounted in 12 months to one month's rent.

Some In Court 8 or 10 Times Yearly

Recommendations presented by the sub-committee called for the appointment of judges, to fill vacancies, who were alert to the problems of the court; full use of powers granted judges under new rules and regulations, and measures to force owners to make repairs on property necessary for health and sanitation.

They also called for closer contact between owners or agents and their property to learn actual conditions; willingness of agents to make payments coincide with paydays; willingness of agents to allow tenants to catch up a lost month's rent by making several small installment payments, thus avoiding continuing monthly court costs.

This Year's Officers Elected

The committee also recommended provision for an experienced case worker who would sit at each court session, obtain first-hand knowledge of worthy cases, investigate and report circumstances to the judges and contact chest agencies, relief and other governmental organizations and generally implement the court's work.

The investigation was made under the supervision of the Washington Housing Association.

Other reports of committee and department chairmen also were made. This was the first report on results of the Tenants' Court study.

The league members assembled at Vacation Lodge in the morning and held an election for those offices to be filled this year. Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, the president, presided. Mrs. Lorenz's term continues for another year. Mrs. Ben McKelway was elected first vice president; Mrs. Blaine McCollum, recording secretary; Mrs. E. Isaacs, corresponding secretary, and Miss Mary Winslow and Mrs. Eugene Duffield, directors.

Reports were given at the morning session by delegates to the recent national convention in New York, including Mrs. Joseph Low and Mrs. Harold Stone, Mrs. Lorenz, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, Mrs. H. P. Becknell and Mrs. Henry W. Moore.

At the close of the meeting Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith presented a resolution calling for a coalition committee on child welfare to make a detailed study of the Kepecs report during the summer with a view to reporting at the league's first fall meeting, preparatory to asking Congress for appropriations. The committee would comprise representatives of various departments whose work touches on child welfare, such as education, social welfare and housing.

Miss Martin Plans Three-State Tour

Miss Marion E. Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, and director of it's women's division, leaves Washington tomorrow for her final speaking and conference trip before the convening of the Republican Convention in Philadelphia June 24. She will return to Washington June 11.

Miss Martin will visit Missouri, Illinois, and Wisconsin. She will address the Missouri Federation of Republican Women's Clubs in Springfield, Mo., June 1. In Illinois, she will confer with leaders in Chicago, and address the Women's Republican Clubs in Joliet and Glen Ellyn. She will be one of the chief speakers at the State Convention of the Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs on June 7 and 8.

Summer Program Of City Club Formed at Dinner

The program committee of the Women's City Club met for dinner at the clubhouse last night and outlined its summer activities. Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, the new president, was present.

Thursday nights through the summer there will be open house at the club, 726 Jackson place. Members will gather with their friends for supper in the coffee shop and games, music and other entertainment will be had.

The first summer supper will be an indoor picnic June 20, with the officers as hostesses and the program in charge of Miss Raymond.

Other hostesses scheduled for the season are: Mrs. Margaret Hill Estes, former secretary of the club, and Mrs. Frank B. Bowling, on June 27; Mrs. Julia Benton Hopkins and Mrs. Gus Schult, July 11. Miss Criena Mahoney and Miss Lottie Anderson, July 18; Miss Isabel Allen and Mrs. Helen Montague, July 25; Mrs. Lila B. Graves, August 1; Miss Elsa Needham, August 8, and Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman and Mrs. Middlemiss, August 15.

To Present Batons

Members of the Monday Morning Music Club, Rubinstein Club and various other groups and many friends of Mrs. Apolline Alexander Blair, have been invited to the Young Women's Christian Association today at 5 p. m. to witness the presentation of a case containing the batons of Mrs. Blair to the Y. W. C. A. For many years she directed a choral group at the "Y. W." and was affiliated with outstanding musical groups in Washington. The batons presented to her by these organizations are a gift from her sons.

Madame Chairman

"—BUT we have to keep smiling faces."

This was a line in a letter received last week by Mme. Blanche Bimont from Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the former Ambassador of France to this country who, with his family was much beloved in Washington. Mme. Bimont is secretary of the Alliance Francaise.

The letter was written just at the time the French forces had left for Norway.

Mme. de Laboulaye said their son, Francois, was temporarily home from the front, recovering from an illness, but his older brother, Paul, was in the sector where the fighting was in progress.

Francois and his young wife have a baby son, but a few months old, and the de Laboulaye's daughter, Marie Therese, who is the wife of Christian de Margerie, has a son and daughter, 1 and 2 years old.

Mme. de Laboulaye is in charge of a center for refugee women at which 700 are working daily. They receive food and other aid and are kept busy sewing and knitting, she wrote. The former Ambassador is now president of the Committee Reconnaisance Francaise, handling all gifts to France.

MME. BIMONT, who has worked tirelessly in relief for France since the war began hopes to return there this summer as she did each summer from 1914 to 1918, to help care for the war orphans. There is a building in Brittany named for her, in recognition of her service then. Last year she returned and worked with the 275 refugee children housed in this institution.

"I do not think I can stand it much longer not to be there," she told me. "I crossed nine times, back and forth during the World War. It should not be more difficult now. Of course I keep busy, but I should be able to do more there."

"Think of the mothers," she said, "not only the mothers in our countries but those in Germany"—and there was equal compassion in her words for all those who suffered from a war not of their making.

AMBASSADOR TO RECEIVE—Members of the Alliance Francaise will be received at the annual reception given by the French Ambassador, Count Rene Saint Quentin, honorary president, Monday, June 3, at 5 o'clock, at the Embassy.

MRS. HENRY GRATTAN DOYLE, executive director of the Self-Help Exchange, leaves today for Grand Rapids, Mich., where she will address the National Conference of Social Workers, speaking before the section on Community Self-Help Exchanges, describing the growth of the local organization.

FEDERATION MEETS—The Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs will have its annual meeting Friday, opening at 10 o'clock, in the Baptist Church of Barnesville, Md., with Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, the president, presiding. The morning will be devoted to business and, in the afternoon, a history of the federation will be given. Mrs. E. A. Farrell, of the Kensington Woman's Club, will discuss the period from 1905 to 1920; Mrs. Franklin Getzendanner, of the Bethesda Club, 1920 to 1930; Mrs. Berle English, 1930 to 1940.

PETWORTH CLUB MEETS—The Petworth Woman's Club will have its annual meeting tonight at the Petworth Methodist Church, with Mrs. Frank Stuart, the president, presiding. Reports of officers and committee chairmen will be given and final plans for the June 6 luncheon discussed.

RECEIVE AT KENMORE—Tomorrow, as a Decoration Day observance, hostesses at Kenmore, home of the Colonial patriot, Col. Fielding Lewis, and his wife, Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington, will receive in costume.

Visitors who go there will be served tea and gingerbread in the kitchen by "Uncle Bacchus," who is 91 years old and one of the few persons living who claims the distinction of having shaken hands with Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Dosia Scott and Roger Poindexter will sing spirituals and children will dance "Turkey in the Straw" to the tune of the banjo.

Women Shoppers Join Picket Line At Press Cafeteria

Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, president of the League of Women Shoppers, and eight other members joined pickets at the Press Cafeteria yesterday during the noon hour.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who is newly elected vice president of the local league, was not on the picket line.

Those who marched were: Mrs. William Hoad, Mrs. Edith Halpern, Mrs. Harold Glasser, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Cynthia Wentworth Hannum, Mrs. Harriet Batterton, Mrs. Michael Straus, and Mrs. Marian Bachrach.

Last night Mrs. Jackson entertained at her home with a supper party for members of outgoing and incoming boards. Mrs. Ickes was present, as were all other members of the two boards.

The picketing yesterday was in harmony with the plan of the national league, decided on at the recent convention in New York, to continue to emphasize the importance of maintaining labor standards despite the pressure of emergency defense measures.

Mrs. Barnett Aids Relief

The unexpected call for condensed milk for children in France received last week has been answered and the milk already is in midocean en route there.

Through the guidance of Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, chairman and vice chairman of Urgent Relief for France, $2,000 was raised in two days and the milk shipped. Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Carr have doubled their efforts and, with the others active in this group, hope to increase the shipment three-fold in time for another ship sailing soon.

Condensed milk may be purchased for $3.10 for 96 cans, and donations are being received at the headquarters for Urgent Relief for France at 1536 Connecticut avenue. All money received goes for relief. All materials and labor are donated.

These women already have sent $3,800.13 for the establishment of eight medical-social centers for the aid of refugees.

Other officers for the Urgent Relief for France are Mrs. Barron P. DuBois, treasurer, and Miss Alma L'H. Rugggles, secretary. The chairmen of committees include Princess Margaret Boncompagni, Mrs. Goerge F. Becker, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Miss Alice L. C. Dodge, Mrs. Melvin Hall, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Miss Anna V. S. Mitchell.

Sponsors, whose work is carried on through the Secour d'Urgence in France, include Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. Charles Stuart Alden, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Irving Hall Chase, Countess de Buyer-Mimeure, Mrs. Sidney A. Cloman, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mrs. Charles S. 3 Groups Ask D.C. Defenses Be Bolstered

Cathedral Heights Sets Up Committee On Preparedness; Hampshire Body Acts

Deeply concerned over the defense of the Capital in the event of an air raid or other enemy attack three organizations last night asked for immediate steps in the direction of preparedness.

The Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association set up a standing committee on preparedness. The Hampshire Heights Association requested better equipment for the city's firemen. Leaders of the "Home Defense League" of World War days, met to plan a reassembling of that organization "to prepare for any emergency."

Cathedral Heights

A standing committee on preparedness for citizen cooperation in measures for security of Washington and the Nation was provided in a resolution adopted by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

Meeting in St. Alban's Church Parish Hall, the association determined to take what steps it could to insure at least discussion of defense measures with other citizen bodies, notably the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations.

The resolution did not indicate that members of the association were considering the possibility of a parachute landing of troops in the Capital. For the most part, it reflected members' preoccupation with the war in Europe and preparations for American rearmament. National defense problems were widely discussed at the meeting.

The association elected these new officers: Culver B. Chamberlain, president; Arthur Clarendon Smith, first vice president; Capt. M. G. Cook, U. S. N., second vice president; Mrs. Olive G. Faircloth, secretary; Miss Ruby Nevins, corresponding secretary; Warren T. Faircloth, treasurer, and Owen B. French and Chamberlain, delegates to the federation.

Paul Edwards, Charles Stephenson, Miss Welda Starr, Miss Ellen Walsh and H. D. Sheiry were elected to membership.

Hampshire Heights

A strong resolution calling for equipping members of the Fire Department to fight effects of invaders' bombs was adopted by the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association at a meeting last night in the Barnard School.

The resolution placed the organization on record in favor of the Government's defense plan and offered cooperation of its membership in event of emergency. It also asked that "immediate consideration" be given to strengthen this line (the personnel of the Fire Department) of defense.

The association suggested installation of more alarm boxes as an immediate step to be taken. It also proposed giving firemen the means of combating incendiary bombs. All firemen, it was emphasized, should be exempted from military duty in war emergency.

Another resolution requested erection of a new firehouse at Hawaii avenue and Bates road northeast. Fire facilities are lagging far behind the needs of the growing community, it was said.

Harry J. Miller was elected to his second term as president of the association. Other officers are J. Leon Bord, first vice president; Mrs. E. C. Atkinson, second vice president; Mrs. Dorothy Kriemelmeyer, secretary; Walter J. Snellings, treasurer; P. G. Ableman and Lawton Mellichampe, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations; Walter Griest, delegate to the Petworth Association, and Robert E. Moore, delegate to Chillum Heights Association.

East Washington

Plans for a city-wide mass meeting of civic leaders interested in reassemblying the "Home Defense League" were made at a meeting of the East Washington defense group last night in the Northeast Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets northeast.

A. D. Calvert, leader of the group, said the purpose of the organization will be "to prepare Washington for any eventuality." During the World War days, the Home Defense League, numbering about 1,000 men, served as "citizen police" corps, supplementing the regular police force whose ranks were depleted by the draft.

Next Wednesday's meeting, which will also be in the Northeast Masonic Temple, will be open to all, Calvert said.

Southeast Citizens

Southeast Citizens Association last night voted to petition the Board of Education for permission to sponsor a school-wide essay contest dealing with industrial arts education and vocational training. The action followed a report by a special committee, of which R. A. White is chairman.

The association also urged Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to consider building a central administrative Police Boys Club building in the vicinity of the Fifth Precinct Police Station, Fifth and E streets southeast.

McCuistion Jailed Here for 30 Days For Being Drunk

William C. McCuistion, Dies Committee witness who was recently indicted for murder of a New Orleans labor leader, was jailed for 30 days yesterday by Police Judge Walter J. Casey.

Police testified that McCuistion tried to hang himself in his jail cell Saturday night a few hours after they had picked him up on the St Elizabeths Hospital grounds in a state of intoxication. McCuistion pleaded guilty, but asked leniency. "I don't drink as a rule," he pleaded.

Hospital Aide Hopes Audition Will Realize Dreams of 21 Years

Sudie Jones, 26-year-old violinist and cashier at Emergency Hospital, will realize her ambition today if her music makes a favorable impression on Leopold Stokowski when he gives auditions to prospective members of his All-American Youth Orchestra. At 5, she began the study of the violin and since had had the desire to play in a symphony

A 26-year-old violinist, who has supported her musical aspirations in an office job at Emergency Hospital, today will compete with nine members of the National Symphony Orchestra as District representative in the All-America Youth Orchestra of Leopold Stokowski.

The 10 Washingtonians and 14 other musicians, 16 to 25, from Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, will be given 20-minute auditions by the conductor, beginning at 9 a. m. at the Washington College of Music, 1741 K street northwest.

National Youth Administration officials said six or seven places, and certainly not more than ten, would be open to the 24 contestants.

The youths who demonstrate to Stokowski's liking their ability to produce pure tones, who read music rapidly at sight, and have a perfected knowledge of orchestral routine, will sail with him July 26 from New York for a tour of South America, according to latest announcement.

For Miss Sudie Jones, Emergency Hospital cashier, of 1309 N. Edgewood street, Clarendon, Va., a favorable impression on the maestro will mean the culmination of a dream she has had since 5.

It was then she started the study of the violin. She continued in undergraduate days at William and Mary College, at a music school in Richmond, Va., and as a member of the symphony orchestra in Norfolk for two years.

She came to the Capital last October, hopeful of rising in symphony circles. But last night she declared herself "not too confident" of success today. She is up against real competition in the nine District contestants, veterans of Hans Kindler's symphony, she said.

Seven students received first prizes of $50 each for their art work at presentation exercises last night at the Corcoran School of Art.

Eleanor Drown, winner of the first prize for sculpture, works by day as a statistician for WPA, and has attended night classes in art. Frank De Moreland, who won the $50 award for drawing, also is a night student, but fills his daytime hours with art, too—turning out war maps and a comic strip.

C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, presented the prizes and accompanying certificates last night. Afterward the audience went to the exhibit hall to inspect the artists' work.

Five high school seniors were announced as winners of scholarships for 1940-1941 to the School of Art through competition. Woodrow Wilson High School won two of the scholarships, which went to Dorothy Miller and Bertram Williams. Other winners were Virginia Averill, Hyattsville High School; Ann Clark, Central High School, and Katherine Grove, Western High School.

A successful year for the School of Art, with 40 more students than ever before, Minnigerode said, was climaxed by the program last night. The enrollment was nearly 500.

Richard Lahey, principal, and other members of the faculty paid tribute to Mrs. Mathilde M. Leisenring, who is retiring from the teaching staff this year.

Winning students were judged on several pieces of work, with the following results:

Lahey life and portrait classes: Mrs. Mary Jane Corr, first prize, $50; Alexandra Kay, second prize, $25; Mrs. Jean Benefield, Francis McGilvery, Holbrook Mueller and William Rutherford, honorable mention.

Weisz life and portrait classes: Christine Westerstrom, first prize, $50; June Virsa, second prize, $25; Julia Herwitz, Aida Prencipe, John Raymond and Eleanor Rust, honorable mention.

Leisenring portrait classes: Mrs. Marian Nelson, first prize, $50; Mrs. Clara M. Leavitt and Margaret Minitree, honorable mention.

Leisenring still life class: Mignon Atchison, first prize, $25; Mrs. Nelly S. Bennet, honorable mention.

Stubbs painting classes: Mary Power, first prize, $50; Wilma Dinowitzer, second prize, $25; Nancy Pake and Eleanor Rives, honorable mention.

Composition Class

Composition class: Ralph Robinson, first prize, $50; Robin Brant, Eli Laura and Eleanor Rives, honorable mention.

Drawing class: Frank De Moreland, first prize, $50; Nancy Lynn, Howard Martin and Clifford Prine, honorable mention.

Sculpture class: Eleanor Drown, first prize, $50; Muriel Jane Austin and Mrs. Belle Bellerose, honorable mention.

Etching class: Honorable mention to Mrs. Genevieve Julra; landscape class, honorable mention to Mrs. Jessalee Sickman; antique drawing and painting class, honorable mention to Nelta Sparkman.

In the Saturday classes for high school students, the following awards were made:

Drawing and painting: Catherine Paxson, first prize, $5; Corinne Mathieson and Jane Ramsdell, honorable mention.

Drawing and painting: Phyllis Baldwin, first prize, $5; Eugene Frederick and Virginia De Alley, honorable mention.

Modeling: Dean Carter, first prize, $5; Joanna Brown, honorable mention.

Homage Paid To War Dead Of America

U. S., Legion Leaders Call for Renewed Faith in Principles Of Flanders Fields

Paying tribute to the dead of this country's wars, six Government and American Legion leaders last night urged strengthened national defenses and renewed allegiance to "the principles for which American soldiers fell in another battle on Flanders fields."

"Even though the guns are firing again over the heads" of the soldiers buried on the scene of European fighting, "we will stand again for liberty and justice," Gen. Frank T. Hines declared on a wreath-decked stage at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving auditorium.

"An internal unity that will stand any test . . . if we are to have the type of citizenship necessary to guide unhappy nations to peace."

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, also urged unity as the bulwark of an "internal defense to be coupled with an Army and Navy so strong this will be no inviting place for invasion."

Representative Flannery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, also urged that "we gird ourselves for the protection of the rights" of individual freedom and self-determination, for which American soldiers fought in the World War, and which now "are being repudiated with violence."

The denunciation by William T. Slattery, commander of the District department of the legion, of the "slaughter of men, women and children," and the "destruction of the liberty" of all peoples in Europe, was echoed by James B. Fitzgerald, national vice commander of the patriotic organization.

Commemorative services today include a meeting at noon sponsored by Department of Agriculture Post No. 36, American Legion, for deceased Agriculture employes. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will be the principal speaker in the Agriculture auditorium.

Representatives of scores of District patriotic organizations, accompanied by detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines, will march down Constitution avenue tomorrow in a parade highlighting Memorial Day. Marchers will start from Ninth street northwest, west to Eighteenth street, starting at 9:45 a. m.

While the graves of 67,000 veterans in Arlington National Cemetery and Washington burial grounds are strewn with flowers by patriotic societies, memorial rites will be held throughout the city and nearby counties.

Chief among these will be a service at 1 p. m. at Arlington sponsored by the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation, at which Security Administrator McNutt will speak.

Dr. Marvin Tells Gallinger Nurse Graduates They Must Know Sacrifice, Courage, Faith

Six fair graduates of the Capital City School of Nursing are (left to right) Hazel Kriner, of Alexandria; Mary Ann Bachtel, of Elyria, Ohio; Inez Bustle, of Bradenton, Fla.; Theo Mitchell, of New Smyrna Beach, Fla.; Iris Adkins, of Leaksville, N. C., and Lorraine Atkins, of Logan, W. Va.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, told the graduates of the Nursing School at Gallinger last night that today of all days they must "know the meaning of sacrifice, courage and faith."

Cautioning that there will be little chance for the accomplishment of spectacular deeds when they enter service, Dr. Marvin urged the graduates to remember that "the most spectacular deed in life today is to do the small, but important things in an efficient way."

In his address, at the nurses' home, he paid tribute to Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, who, he said, had built a great hospital despite obstacles such as the lack of Congressional interest and the lack of funds. He added:

"He has had to make a lot of bricks without straw, and they must be pretty good bricks, as evidenced by the buildings we see here."

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church. Miss Catherine E. Moran, superintendent of nurses, presented the class pins and Dr. Bocock the diplomas.

The valedictory address was delivered by Miss Evelyn Wyatt. Miss Isabel Bourassa received the Alumnae Medal from Mrs. Frances McE. Raum, president of the alumna association.

Dr. P. S. Rossiter, chief of the hospital staff, presided at the ceremony. Music was provided by the Marine Band.

D.C. Democrats Get 13 New Committeemen

List to Be Voted on In Primary June 5 Without Contest

The District's Democratic central committee has acquired 13 new members, it was learned yesterday with the publication of names of candidates whose qualification last Friday is the equivalent of election.

The list, to be voted upon in a no-contest primary June 5, includes Melvin D. Hildreth, Charles L. Hanowell, Rowland Marshall, Dr. F. Thomas Evans, Mrs. Eunice Blake Thomas, Hugh V. Keiser, Harold H. Shaller, Arthur Schoenthal, Clem Preller, Harlan Wood, Robert W. Burton, Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, and Sidney R. Katz.

Hildreth was appointed to the committee by the former chairman, John B. Colpoys, United States Marshal, but none of the 13, it was explained, was a member of the 1936 committee. Hildreth was named vice chairman at the last meeting of the old committee.

Other "qualified candidates," all members of the old committee, are Russell Balderson, chairman; Walter F. Bramhall, secretary; James V. Beyer, who has been a committeeman since 1884; Dr. J. Ernest Mitchell, John Locher, Sam B. Bagnan, Frank W. Cahill, John J. McConnell and Richard A. Dickson.

Just as no more than the full committee membership of 22 qualified, similarly, only the District's quota of 12 was announced as candidates to the national convention. They are Malcolm S. McConihe, District national committeeman; Robert W. Woolley, former director of the Mint; John Walsh, brother of the late Senator Walsh; Leslie C. Garnett, former United States District Attorney; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard; John Wattowa, 1924 delegate; William Jett Lauck, economist, and Balderson, Hildreth, Bramhall, Keiser and Mrs. Condon.

Mrs. Thomas and Beyer were qualified as alternates.

As there will be no contest for any local party office, the only election issue will be the question of whether the convention delegation shall be voted as a unit.

Capital News In Brief

Yeggs Go With Ham

Unable to crack a safe in a chain grocery at 1507 U street northwest, burglars eased their frustration—and their appetites—with eight hams and three sides of bacon, William Moore, of Arlington, Va., the manager, reported yesterday. The value was placed at $15.50.

30 Nurses Get Diplomas

Graduation exercises for the School of Nursing of Georgetown University Hospital will be held today at 4 p. m. in Gaston Hall on the university campus. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., Georgetown president, will make the commencement address and present diplomas to 30 nurses.

Old Bridal Gowns Shown

A pageant of ministers' brides, garbed in wedding gowns dating from 1880 until today, will feature a spring festival tonight at 8 at Calvary Methodist Church, Fifteenth street and Columbia road northwest. It will be for the benefit of Swartzell Methodist Children's Home.

52 Garfield Graduates

Fifty-two girls will become graduate nurses tonight at 8 o'clock on the Garfield Hospital grounds, Eleventh street and Florida avenue northwest. The Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, of Catholic University, commencement speaker, will discuss "The Nurse Faces a Changing World."

WPA Makes Offer Of 20 Supervisors For Girls' Club

Recreational plans for children out of school this summer and an all-year program for girls progressed yesterday as the WPA made a provisional offer of 20 play supervisors for use in the projected girls' club movement, and the Playground Department announced its new list of summer playgrounds.

The additional summer playgrounds listed are Eaton, Lafayette, Murch, Pierce Mill, Corcoran, Fillmore-Gordon, Stoddart, Western Stadium, Shepherd, Barnard, Brightwood, H. D. Cooke, Powell, Fairbrother, Brookland, Noyes, Woodbridge, Benning, Eliot, Hayes, Lincoln Park, Ludlow, Maury, Stanton Park, Wheatley, Congress Heights, Orr, Stanton, Van Buren, Cleveland, Garrison, Grimke, Harrison, Bruce, Slater-Langston, Morse, Douglass-Simmons, Bundy, Briggs, Wormley, Crummell, Bell, Syphax, and Smothers.

Three Reappointed To Library Board

The Commissioners yesterday reappointed Theodore W. Noyes, Wendell P. Stafford, and Albert W. Atwood as members of the board of trustees of the Free Public Library.

Their present term expires June 19. The terms are for six years each.

Group Lauds Young, Neilson, Who Blush

Columbia Historical Society Holds Dinner To Fete Appointees

Two new District officeholders reddened like blushing brides last night as they listened to almost a score of civic leaders and Washington correspondents pay them tribute in glowing terms.

But Commissioner Young and Police Judge George Neilson relaxed in their platform seats at the Mayflower Hotel when former Judge Robert E. Mattingly commented:

"I don't know John Russell Young personally. But from all the superlatives that have been cast at him tonight, he is the best man ever to hold the office of Commissioner . . . or any other office."

The tributes were made at a special meeting of the Columbia Historical Society in honor of the new appointees, both of whom were recently invited to membership.

Declaring his gratitude for "the support of a body like this," Commissioner Young said that he started his new job with a survey of the District institutions that have been criticized for defects.

"I visited the Home for the Feebleminded," he said, "but they didn't keep me there. I haven't been to the reformatory yet.

In a more serious vein, Judge Neilson emphasized the part the courts must play in "preserving the liberties and the freedom of our democracy," and promised that on the bench he would always try to remember that "in this great democracy every person is entitled to a fair hearing, to his day in court."

Other speakers included Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade; Ralph Pollio, president of the Lions Club, and Henry P. Blair, former member of the Board of Education.

500 Children Go On Pilgrimage To Cedar Hill

Nearly 500 children from colored schools of the District yesterday made a pilgrimage to the Cedar Hill, Anacostia, home of Frederick Douglass, born in slavery and who rose to become a lecturer, journalist and one-time United States Minister to Haiti.

The pupils went by bus and private car to the Cedar Hill shrine at 1:30 p. m. Music was supplied by the Cardozo High School Orchestra and the Stevens Elementary School Glee Club. After the welcoming address by Anne E. Dodson, of Miners Teachers College, and the benediction by the Rev. F. F. King,

Senate Votes 5 D. C. Bills, Ignores 3

King Prepares To Clear Calendar; Parole Reform Program Passes

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday approved five District bills under unanimous consent and passed over three controversial measures as Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, prepared to clear the calendar for the session.

Most important of the local bills passed were amendments to the indeterminate sentence and parole law and a proposal to set up a commission to rewrite the District Code.

The parole law amendments, which in general stop loopholes and bring the District law in closer conformance with the Federal act, have passed the House and now go to the White House.

One of the amendments prohibits courts from imposing a minimum sentence in excess of one-third of the maximum sentence. This amendment also raises the minimum sentence that must be served before a prisoner is eligible for parole from one-fifth to one-third of the maximum sentence.

Another amendment permits a prisoner on parole to go to some other place than his home and places him in the custody of the Attorney General rather than in the custody of the superintendent of the institution from which he was paroled.

The Bilbo bill to create a commission for the revision of the District Code is expected to encounter opposition in the House as the House Committee on Revision of Laws is engaged in a similar undertaking.

The measure provides for the appointment of five persons by the Attorney General for three years at $6,000 each. When the new code is drafted it will be submitted to Congress for adoption following its approval by the Attorney General.

The District would bear 40 per cent and the Federal Government 60 per cent of the cost of the code revision. Whereas the original bill stipulated that four of the five members should be members of the District bar, the measure as passed carries no such requirement. The amendment was made at the request of the Attorney General.

The other three bills passed by the Senate: Authorize the Commissioners to sell parking space in the Municipal Center, make a minor change in adoption law, restore Amos B. Cole, dismissed Metropolitan policeman, to the retirement roll.

Objections were voiced to the Tydings fair trade practices bill and the resolution to authorize construction of a toll bridge at Great Falls. The controversial measure to set up a division for recording auto liens in the department of vehicles and traffic was not called up.

FLUSH KIDNEYS OF POISONS AND STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS

Live a Healthier, Happier, Life

Thousands of men and women wonder why backache bothers them—why they have to visit the bathroom often at night—why flow is scanty and sometimes smarts and burns.

Any one of these symptoms may mean that your kidneys and bladder need attention now before these minor symptoms may develop into serious trouble.

To flush out excess waste poisons and acid from kidneys, soothe your irritated bladder and put more healthy activity into them, get a 35 cent package of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Capsules and take as directed.

This harmless, tried and true medicine gives results—you should feel better in a few days, as this effective diuretic and kidney stimulant drives excess uric acid from the body which is often the aggravation of joint agony, sciatica and neuritis.

Don't be an EASY MARK and accept a substitute—Get Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original and genuine. Look for the Gold Medal on the box—35 cents. Adv.

* WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, MAY 29, 1940 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, May 28.—You can put night baseball in Brooklyn, but you can't make 'em see the light. Brooklyn is going to win no National League pennant; at least not until somebody takes Head Man Larry McPhail aside and whispers into his ear a few of the facts of life.

POVICH

The deals that McPhail has been making in an attempt to strengthen the Brooklyn outfield detract no whit from the reputation of Flatbush as the daffiest of all towns. What other club in the majors would pay close to $20,000 for a first baseman who was hitting .086, as the Dodgers did for Jimmy Wasdell? McPhail, moreover, said First Baseman Wasdell was to be an outfielder. By decree, no doubt.

The fact that no club in the American League would have Wasdell at the $7,500 waiver price didn't deter the Dodgers. For nearly a year, McPhail had been begging Clark Griffith to sell him Wasdell. Wasdell's value to the Dodgers must be sentimental. Certainly it is not intrinsic. Anyway, Griffith finally broke down and decided to sell his .086 hitter for three times as much as he was worth in the American League.

If McPhail is not daffy on the subject of American League castoffs he is doing a fair job of simulating it. Of late he has been heaping proof on proof. Closely following the Wasdell deal, McPhail announced that he had scored again. He announced that the Dodgers had acquired Outfielder Joe Gallagher, of the Browns.

Who did the Dodgers give for Gallagher? Roy Cullenbine, remember him? Six months ago, Cullenbine was supposed to be the fellow the Dodgers needed to make their outfield. McPhail was so fully convinced of that that he sent emissaries to Cullenbine's home town at the first flash of the news that the fellow had been declared a free agent by Judge Landis last winter. "We'll outbid any club for Cullenbine," proclaimed McPhail.

Well, they did. The Dodgers inveigled Cullenbine into signing a Brooklyn contract for a $25,000 bonus. One of the reasons they wanted him was because he was a switch hitter. He could bat against all kinds of pitching. He never hit as much as .300 in his life, but somehow the Dodgers ignored that fact. They wanted Cullenbine.

All of a sudden, yesterday, in fact, McPhail discovered that he didn't want Cullenbine. One of the reasons may have been that the fellow was batting a measly .180 for the Dodgers, or maybe McPhail simply didn't like the way Cullenbine parted his hair. Anyway, Cullenbine was the order of the day.

It seems that the Dodgers wanted big Joe Gallagher, an outfielder with the Browns, and for Gallagher they gave the $25,000 Cullenbine whose .180 average was stamping him as a Brooklyn Beauty. The Dodgers wanted Gallagher despite the fact that Gallagher couldn't make a job for himself with the Browns and at the time of his purchase was batting .257. Only the Dodgers want that sort of a performer.

If McPhail had taken the trouble to inquire around the American League he would have been told that Cullenbine, despite his batting slump in Brooklyn, was a sight better ball player than Gallagher, who is muscle bound and couldn't hit a fast ball or a curve ball outside if he were swinging a bull fiddle in each hand.

It was with reason, perhaps, that Ty Cobb wore those dark glasses when he was in the East last month. McPhail might have signed him. The Dodger boss's affinity for old American Leaguers is exceeded only by his generosity with the funds of the bank that controls the Brooklyn club.

Gallagher is the seventh American League discard McPhail has signed for his outfield within the last two years. When the Yankees bounced Ernie Koy a couple of seasons ago the Dodgers caught him on the rebound so quickly he didn't know he was hired until they had him in a Brooklyn uniform. Dixie Walker was waved out of the American League post haste and the Dodgers got him sure 'nuff; no American League club would have the archaic Joe Vosmik for the $7,500 waiver price, but Brooklyn prevailed upon the Red Sox to let him go for $10,000. The Dodgers paid $25,000, honest, for Mel Almada, of the Browns. Then Cullenbine, then Wasdell, then Gallagher.

They can all be grouped under the broad heading of McPhailures.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 28.—What they say—(but not about Dixie):

Joe DiMaggio—"I think we're out of the woods at last. I don't know how to put my finger on it, but we got going in Detroit. All of a sudden it seemed like a new ball club . . . maybe I should say it seemed like the old one. There was a new life; we didn't feel low down any more. Even when Buck Newsom beat us out there, 3-2, it was all right. He wouldv'e beaten us any time, the way he was going that day. But we knew we were on our way, finally.

CONSIDINE

"The hardest ball I ever hit? Well, there was that home run in the Polo Grounds . . . Y'know, against the Giants. But I guess I hit two of them harder than that. Both outs. That fellow Weatherly, the Cleveland center fielder, got both of them. Easy outs. And both off Feller, too.

"That Feller's the greatest thing I ever saw. Last year and before that he was way up here with one pitch, then another one in the dirt, then one over the plate. Now he's always around the plate with the ball; except he never throws one right over. I mean he never gives you a good one. Throw me fast balls. Low, inside.

"How do you like this golden laurel? Pretty, isn't it. Too bad Bucky Walters missed out on it. He deserved it just as much as I did."

Tad Wieman—Don Herring's coming along fine. He caught up with his studies and is doing better than ever with them. That new leg of his is a great device. He gets around fine, can work out, and maybe in a year he'll be able to do pretty well with the discus. But as for doing any better than 'pretty well' that's just wishful thinking on our part."

Mrs. Ed Barrow (standing with Mrs. Lou Gehrig at the unveiling of Burris Jenkins' great 80-foot cartoon at the Fair's Academy of Sport. One of the mammoth figures is a ball player, with his back turned, and the number on his back is "8").

"I'm going to see that nice Mr. Jenkins, Eleanor, and get him to change that number to '4'."

"Is sports really the highly-touted character builder which so many claim it to be," writes Harry Hellman, of Upper Montclair, N. J. "This inquiry is being carried out in connection with a term paper which I am writing."

Well, Harry, yes and on the other hand no. Every sport has its share of bad sports, cheats, alibi artists and moral cowards, so we can safely say that several exposures to sports doesn't automatically remove human blemishes.

The characters of some men unquestionably have been helped by the lessons of the playing fields, but, of course, they had something there in the first place and it needed only a little rekindling. We suspect that by and large the average athlete emerges from his sports career pretty much as he entered it. However, fewer athletes crack up and go to pieces than do the inmates of any other profession. and one reason for this might be the grim way in which the various sports are policed. The moral and alcohol codes of sports are as prim as they were in other American groups of the late nineteenth century. In baseball alone, Rogers Hornsby is tacitly barred because he likes to (shh) bet on race horses. Scandalous, even though you and you do it. And Rollie Hemsley is only now getting back in good standing, for showing a dastardly liking for a legal liquid named beer. He was also caught red-handed several times, coming back to his hotel at 1 a. m.

In short, sports helps some and (by its Victorian Standards of deportment) tends to keep millions of athletes out of the mischief they'd fall into if they had no sports to occupy their minds.

Bill Fisher Hurls 3-Hit Game, Fans 10

Raiders Without A Safety Until 5th; Mates Afford Him Sensational Aid

By Bill Burnett

The "stop Central" movement in the interhigh series was shifted to Griffith Stadium yesterday, but progressed no better than at various public school parks during the season.

With their usual flare, the Vikings hung a 4-0 setback on Western in the first game of the interhigh championship round robin. Thus only one team now stands between the 1939 titlists and their second straight crown, the winner of today's battle at Anacostia Field between Eastern and Tech which will be met Tuesday.

If Billy Fisher, a perfect double in appearance for Joe DiMaggio, doesn't take sole responsibility for yesterday's triumph it belongs to an infield which backed him up sensationally. Fisher tossed a three-hit pitching performance in the teeth of Western's sluggers and fanned ten. He didn't give up a hit until the fifth, and struck out three in succession in the third. He was in serious difficulty only once, but he squelched that in short order.

Fisher Bears Down

It was the fifth inning when Western came closest to scoring. The first man up, Jim Malarkey, got to first on Benny Steiner's high throw to first which Johnny Whalan handled poorly. Eddie Cockrill singled, sending Malarkey to third and himself went to second on a fielder's choice. With Raiders on second and third, then, Fisher fanned Teddy Bright and Carmel Nance in order. He walked Hal Mitchell, but forced Joe Withers to send up a weak pop fly.

Sam Di Blasi scored Central's first run in the second, after reaching base on Mitchell's error and taking second on one of two passed balls charged against Bright. Whalan drove him in with a single, the second hit of the inning. Steiner got the first, a double, but was thrown out at third by Bright after the latter took a crazy throw from centerfield.

The Vikings' three other tallies were bunched in the fourth. Zello Lagos started things with a single, moved to second on Malarkey's misplay, to third on a passed ball and finally combined with Steiner, who had walked, in a double steal to reach home. Steiner scored when Wrenn dropped Sam Di Blasi's smash into the outfield. Di Blasi was out at second on Mosser's fielder's choice, but after Whalan had walked, Jim Mandes wound up scoring with a clean single to center that sent Mosser home.

Nanes Gives 6 Hits

Southpaw Nance hurled a six-hit game in Western's behalf, but was the victim of bunched blows and crucial errors. After Steiner had doubled in the second inning, Nance voided the threat of his hitting by walking the brilliant shortstop twice and forcing him to fly out to centerfield the third time.

Western contributed the most sensational play of the game. With the bases packed and two out in the eighth Wrenn raced far to his right to take Di Blasi's line drive, managed to slap it into the air, and caught it on his fingertips as he tumbled to the grass.

Leaders Bunch Hits To Break Tie and Win Night Game at Philly

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 28.—Bunching 6 of their 14 hits in the last two innings to break a 1-1 tie, the Boston Red Sox scored three runs to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 1, before 27,151 at Shibe Park tonight.

The defeat was the fifth straight setback for the A's.

Johnny Babich, seeking his third straight win over the league-leading Red Sox, pitched brilliantly until the eighth when Rog Cramer led off with a two-bagger. After Ted Williams walked, Jimmy Foxx singled to right, but Wally Moses' great throw got Cramer at the plate. Manager Joe Cronin then "squeezed" Williams home with what proved to be the winning run.

Dennis Galehouse limited the A's to eight hits. In the eighth he fanned Bob Johnson, Frank Hayes and Dick Siebert in order.

Third base in yesterday's interhigh playoff game between Central and Western at Griffith Stadium got quite a workout, as these shots would indicate. Upper—Benny Steiner, Central's shortstop, is tagged out by Karas in the second inning as he attempts to stretch his double. Below—Jim Malarkey, Raider outfielder, slides safely past Di Blasi in the fifth. He got no further, though, Central earning a 4-0 shutout victory

Dodgers Beat Phillies, 4-2; Gain Ground

By International News Service

New York, May 28.—Brooklyn tightened its grip on first place by trimming the Phillies tonight, 4 to 2, in the Dodgers' first game under the arc lights this season. As the Cincinnati Reds lost to the Pirates this afternoon, the Dodgers gained a full game on the second-place Reds.

Fred Fitzsimmons pitched steady ball for the Dodgers as he gained his fourth triumph of the season without any defeats charged against him. Fitz limited the Phils to six hits.

Hugh Mulcahy started for the Phils but was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh after the Dodgers scored all their runs off him. Lloyd Brown finished the game for the visitors and allowed one hit in two innings. Babe Phelps, with two

Champs Rise To Fourth on Twin Victory

Monteagudo Beaten In Nightcap Though He Fans 8; Lewis' Homer Is Only Run

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

New York, May 28.—The Nats relieved themselves of some Belgian baseball today. They capitulated twice. They surrendered the first game of a doubleheader to the Yankees, 12 to 4. In the second game, they virtually laid down their arms and took a 3-to-1 beating.

Little Rene Monteguado fought a lone sort of battle for the Nats to the finish. He was a gallant sort of victim in that second game after the Yanks had bombarded Joe Haynes and Sid Hudson in the opener. He struck out eight Yankees and shut them out after the third inning, but he could count on little help from his pals and lost his duel with Forrest Breuer, who held the Nats to seven hits.

Buddy Lewis averted the ignominy of a shut-out defeat for the Nats. He did it with a fourth inning homer into the rightfield bleachers. Lewis was one of the three Nats that Breuer allowed to advance as far as second base, which gives you an idea of the manner in which the Washington athletes were slugging the old apple.

Nats Drop to Seventh Place

The Nats were presented with their first opportunity of the season to lose two games in a single afternoon, and they did it pretty thoroughly. They fell back to seventh place, which is no prepared position, incidentally. The Yanks, who are beginning to roll, today won their ninth victory in their last 12 games.

The first game was a very messy affair from a Washington viewpoint. Bucky Harris, hard-pressed for pitchers, gambled with Joe Haynes and the Yanks collected handsomely. They warmed up with one run off Haynes in the first inning and then let go with a four-run blast in the second.

Gordon Homers

Sid Hudson got the job at that point and he was no amazing success. Joe Gordon rocked hm for a pair of runs in the third inning with a homer at a time when Selkirk was on base and at the end of the fourth, the Yanks had an 8-1 lead. They picked up a run against him in the seventh and then Bill Dickey fired a parting shot at Hudson in the eighth. It was a home run into the rightfield stands with two on base.

But the Nats' first-game collapse dates from that luscious Yankee second inning in which Haynes pitched consecutive doubles to Selkirk and Gordon and then wild pitched a run home. He hit a batter and surrendered three more singles and two more runs before the inning was over.

Left-handed Marius Russo was the winning Yankee pitcher in that first game. He gave up a run at the outset when Gerry Walker doubled Lewis home, but he didn't give up another until the sixth when Walker doubled again and Bloodworth singled. When the Nats pushed a pair of runs home in the eighth to cut the Yanks' lead to 10-4, Joe McCarthy lifted Russo in panic and Johnny Murphy took charge effectively.

One Bad Inning

That second game, however, was more interesting. Monteagudo had one bad inning—the first—but thereafter he was bamboozling the Yanks with his southpaw curve balls. In view of the futility of the Nats at bat, the Yanks won the game in the first inning, when they raked Monty for two runs. Crosetti singled, stole second, went to third when Keller beat out a scratch hit, and was balked home by Monteagudo. A bit later Joe DiMaggio, who had walked, scored from third on Dickey's fly.

In the third inning, Bill Dickey's double scored DiMaggio, who had singled, but thereafter Monteagudo was invincible.

He was getting little help from the Nats, however. They wasted scoring chances in the second and third innings, and it wasn't until the fourth that Lewis delivered his homer. In the fifth, Early walked with two out, and singles by Monteagudo and Case filled the bases, but Lewis could produce only a harmless fly ball.

Lewis singled with two out in the eighth to no avail, and in the ninth Joe Gordon delivered Breuer from danger with an incredible play on Walker's terrific grounder smash to throw him out. Bloodworth singled with two out, but Pinch-hitter Sammy West hit into game-ending force play.

Bees' Owner May Quit Baseball

Landis Reported Putting Pressure On Charles Adams

By Judson Bailey.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, May 28.—The grapevine is loaded down with rumors that there is ominous buzzing in Boston's beehive . . . and we don't mean on the field. . . . One version is that Commissioner K. M. Landis is exerting pressure on Owner Charles Adams to choose between baseball and horse racing. . . . The millionaire chain-store owner who came into possession of the Bees more or less unwillingly a couple of years ago, owns the Suffolk Downs race track. . . . Because of this joint interest of Adams, reports have been around for sometime that Landis refuses to let him use any of his personal funds to assist the Bees.

Luke Hamlin, the Brooklyn Dodgers' pitcher, isn't really named "Luke." . . . His parents christened him simply "L. D. Hamlin." . . . Bucky Walters, now that his position as a star is established, rests in the dressing room instead of participating in batting practice before a game in which he is going to pitch. . . . Fred Lindstrom, who ought to know, has placed his stamp of approval on Rookie Bob Kennedy, of Chicago White Sox, as a third baseman. . . Stan Hack and Billy Herman, of the Cubs, both of whom were hospital cases in New York last week, didn't miss any of Chicago's 156 games last year.

Jim Tobin, the big right-hander the Boston Bees obtained from Pittsburgh, has been sent to a hospital for another week's treatment. . . . He hasn't worked an inning this season. . . . Joe McCarthy is beefing about the schedule which calls for four Western trips and short series . . . Wants plan of former years for three swings around the circuit with three and four games at each end . . . . Red Rolfe of the Yankees is laid up with a cold . . . Doc Cramer, who never had hit a home run, since joining the Boston Red Sox, now is called "Babe" by teammates because of his circuit clout against the Detroit Tigers.

The reason Billy Myers was out of the Cincinnati line-up so long was that Eddie Joost made only one error in 21 games at shortstop. . . . Myers thought so little of his own chances that he started working out in leftfield before Bill McKechnie sent him back to short. Brooklyn pitchers have given up some 30 home runs already. . . . Bill Stewart has been the plate umpire for the National League's last three no-hit games—Johnny Vander Meer's two in 1938 and Tex Carlton's last month. . . . 33 Drivers Are Qualified for Indianapolis Race Tomorrow

Mays Earns Pole Spot; Speed: 127

31 Americans, One Frenchman and One Argentinian Make Up Maximum Field

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 28.—Thirty-one American drivers, one Argentine and a Frenchman with a damaged car will make up the starting field Thursday for the twenty-eighth running of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The French entry is the Italian Maserati driven by Rene Lebegue, a French soldier.

The car threw a piston arm through the crankshaft this morning.

Bernard Musnik, manager of the French team, first said the car could not be repaired. Then he said it could be repaired. A third statement was that it would be possible to transfer to Lebegue's car the motor used in the one driven by Rene Dreyfus, eliminated today by qualifiers with superior speed.

Dreyfuss Alternate

Musnik declared Lebegue's car "will be repaired in time for the race." He said Lebegue "will start the car" and that Dreyfus would serve as "alternate driver."

Thirty-six cars qualified for the classic but three of them, including Dreyfus' machine, were crowded out today by entries making faster qualifying speeds. Only 33 cars may start.

Others eliminated were those driven by Louis Durant, of Herrington, Kans., and Tony Willman, of Milwaukee.

Devore Wins Place

Billy Devore, of St. John, Kans., and Floyd Davis, of Springfield, Ill., won starting places today. William eliminated Durant and then, in turn, was knocked out by Davis.

Devore, driving the same car in which Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, won the 1937 race, showed the best time today. He ran his 10 miles at 122.179 miles an hour. Davis' speed was 120.797 miles an hour. William turned his 10 miles at 118.914 miles an hour. His first two laps were run at approximately 123 miles an hour but motor trouble slowed him to 115 on each of the next two turns of the oval.

The average qualifying speed for the 33 starters was slightly under 123 miles an hour—slower than the 123.356 average a year ago.

Last-Minute Try

There was the usual last-minute rush to qualify and Henry Banks, of Royal Oak, Mich., took the starting flag just seconds before the 5 p. m. deadline. He ran one lap at 114 miles an hour and was flagged in.

Overton Phillips, of Los Angeles, made two attempts in the closing hours, but never could get his car up to the required 115 miles an hour.

Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., won the pole position in the front row with a speed of 127.850 miles an hour. Lebegue's 118.981 was the slowest time.

Only Lebegue and Louis Tomei, of Van Nuys, Calif., qualified at less than 120 miles an hour.

Randle's Jumper Wins at Devon

Devon, Pa., May 28.—Randle's Way, big chestnut gelding owned by U. S. Randle, of Washington, won the time class and open jumping sweepstakes here today in the second session of the Devon Horse show.

To Victory, steady little 4-year-old mare, lived up to her name to put her owners, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, of Cobham, Va., in the lead with five blue ribbons, the Associated Press reported.

Carrying 185 pounds over typical field jumps, To Victory went clean in the middle weight green hunter class, then came through in the conformation judging.

A stablemate, Scotchwood, has won two firsts and Zarp, 3-year-old gelding, has won both classes in which he competed.

Greiner Enters Hermitage Play

Richmond, Va., May 28 (AP).—Otto Greiner, youthful Baltimore University student and former mid-Atlantic golf champion, today filed his entry for the fifth Hermitage Invitational tournament to be played here this weekend.

Already more than 70 entries have reached Chairman John R. Chappell, jr., and indications are that from 25 to 50 more will be received before play starts on Thursday.

Cameo Runner Safe in Nip-and-Tuck Sandlot Clash

Third Baseman Shelton, of the Heurich Brewers, was forced to dig deep for the ball as Cameo's Albert arrived safely at third in the sixth inning of yesterday's Post League game. The Beermen won, however, 3-2

Tigers Whip Indians, 8-5; Near 2d Spot

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 28.—The Detroit Tigers pulled within a game and a half of second-place Cleveland today on Al Benton's excellent relief twirling. The 8-to-5 outcome represented the Tigers' second straight win over the Indians.

Cleveland shelled youthful Hal Newhouser from the slab in a third-inning rally which produced four Cleveland runs, but Benton halted the attack and allowed only six hits and one run the remainder of the way. Detroit's 11 hits—the same number Cleveland garnered—included six doubles.

Oscar Vitt, Cleveland manager, used five pitchers. Johnny Allen was clubbed hard but went out soon enough to see Bill Zuber, his immediate successor, charged with the setback.

The Tigers took a 5-4 advantage on two runs in the fifth when Charley Gehringer walked, Hank Greenberg doubled and Rudy York singled both men home. Johnny Humphries then appeared as the third Cleveland pitcher and promptly retired the side, but gave up three runs in the sixth.

Worm Turns Dept.: Bucs Beat Reds, 5-2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 28.—Holding the Cincinnati Reds to five hits, big Max Butcher rang up his first victory of the season today as the Pittsburgh Pirates hammered out an eight-hit attack to score a 5-to-2 victory.

It was the first time this year the last-place Bucs have succeeded in beating the National League champions.

With Arky Vaughan and Elbie Fletcher leading the way with two hits each, the Bucs got six hits off Junior Thompson and two off Jack Hutchings, who relieved Thompson in the sixth inning.

Vaughan scored the first Pirate run in the second inning, racing home as Johnny Rizzo made a poor throw to the plate on Maurice Van Robay's long fly.

Vaughan opened the fourth with a triple with the bases empty, then romped home off Fletcher's single. Frankie Gustine rapped out a double to score Fletcher. Gustine brought in the third run when Virgil Davis hoisted a high fly to Linus Frey.

The Bucs got another run in the eighth on a squeeze play. Fletcher walked and Gustine laid down a perfect bunt enabling Fletcher to scamper home.

The Reds scored in the fourth frame after Bill Werber doubled. McCormick walked and Ernie Lombardi bounced into a double-play as Werber went to third. Rizzo was passed and then Harry Craft beat out a slow bounding single to Jeep Handley, scoring Werber.

Werber blasted out a homer in the eighth for the Reds' other counter.

The Pirates played tight ball behind Butcher's pitching, their lone error being a harmless fumble by Vaughan. Rizzo and Bill Myers were credited with two errors for the Reds.

Browns Down Chisox Twice, 10-9 and 7-5

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 28.—After trimming Chicago, 10 to 9, in the first game of a twin bill, the Browns captured the nightcap, 7 to 5.

George McQuinn walloped two homers for St. Louis in the opener, his blows in the third and sixth each accounting for two runs. Myril Hoag tagged Chicago's starter, Rigney, for a three-run homer in the first frame. Joe Kuhel and Eric McNair hit home runs for the White Sox, who made 16 hits.

Kreevich and Rosenthal clouted four-baggers for the White Sox in the nightcap, but the Browns clinched the game with three runs in the sixth.

Bob Harris was the winning hurler and Jack Knott the loser.

Posnack's Hit Beats Cameo For Heurich

Mack Posnack, first sacker, came through with a crucial single in the eighth inning to give the Heurich Brewers their second victory of The Washington Post Industrial League season over Cameo Furniture yesterday. The 3-2 triumph broke a first-place tie and left the Beermen in undisputed first place.

With the score knotted 2-2, and Second Baseman Kaufman resting on second, Posnack hit cleanly down the rightfield line to score his mate with the winning run. The loss dropped Cameo to second place with five victories and two defeats, while Heurich took top spot with six and one.

Rene Monteagudo was the standout performer for the Nats in the Yankee Stadium twin bill yesterday despite his defeat, and to him goes the major share of points in the Man of the Month contest.

To Monteagudo, eight points, because he went the route, allowed the Yankees only three runs, and struck out eight in a valiant attempt to keep the Nats in the ball game.

To Gerald Walker, four points, because he made three successive hits in the first game, two of them doubles.

To Buddy Lewis, four points, because his second game homer, saved the Nats from a shutout, and because he made two of the Nats seven hits in that game.

Overlin Again Issues Defi To Mamakos

New Welter Champion Would Gamble $1,000 He Can Beat Greek

Ken Overlin, who has a well known penchant for talking, yesterday proclaimed to one and all that he is prepared to better the $750 guarantee to Steve Mamakos Promoter Joe Turner put up to get the Greek into a local ring with Phil Furr, Washington welterweight, Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

Back from New York where he won the Broadway version of the world's middleweight championship over Ceferino Garcia, Overlin said his old offer of $1,000 to Mamakos still holds good.

"I'll take that bum on any time, and my offer of $1,000 to him if he beats me is still there," Overlin chortled.

Mamakos must get by Overlin's stablemate, Furr, however, before getting a chance at Overlin's proposition, made in one of his moods several months ago between fights at Turner's arena.

Chris Dundee, manager of Furr and Overlin, said he'd be very happy to have Overlin take on Mamakos in Washington in July. Dundee is at Mme. Bey's Summit, N. J., camp supervising Furr's training for the 12-round battle Monday night in the ball park, and he added that he thinks Furr will remove the necessity of a Mamakos-Overlin battle.

Meanwhile, the District Boxing Commission announced yesterday that the request of Matt Twomey, Mamakos' manager, for a special ruling on cut eyes has been turned down. Twomey asked that if the fight is stopped because of a cut eye the lad leading on points at the time be declared the winner. Secretary Heinie Miller said such a provision would require a revision of the existing rules.

On Fishing

Surfmen have been impatiently awaiting news that the big fish were running the North Carolina beaches—within reach. They are, for during the past week several fine catches have been made. Channel bass are running in weight from 25 to 40 pounds, so far, in the section below Cape Hatteras. This week should see them in the Oregon Inlet area.

ACKERMAN

They are taking them at Wachaprague, also, but from boats, and only occasionally. This fishing will improve greatly, now that the northeaster has blowed itself out.

The largest channel bass entered to date in the George Ruppert contest, is a 22-pounder caught this winter at Islamorado, Fla. It looks as though anglers as well as fishing captains are missing a bet in not entering some of these much larger North Carolina fish, for this contest pays off in hard dollars of the realm for the three top fish—to the captain of the boat taking the best one also.

The heavy weather of the past week slowed up the hardheads in some sections of the western shore of Maryland, but for the Federal Trade Commission anglers who fished under Point No Point Light with Capt. Taft Tippett, of Ridge, it seemed to be no deterrent. Their catch of over a hundred is the best we have had reported from upper bay waters this season. In the catch was one two-pound trout.

The weather is probably the reason for no reports of offshore fishing for the past several days. The run of mackerel, according to the last report was at its top form. Trout, porgies and seabass were biting in fine shape on the wrecks. This week should find the going better than ever.

The Alexandria Skeet Club is putting on the regular Memorial Day Shoot. Prizes will be shells or orders for sporting goods.

The Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair, which this year will be held at Crisfield, well down on the Eastern Shore, will have several new angles. The most important is that fish caught in any area are eligible for entry, which will allow far more boats to compete and make it what it is supposed to be—a bay affair.

A lively po'nt of discussion at the meeting of Fair directors at Capt. Randolph Harrison's on Tilgham's Island last week was the question of the conservation of our rockfish schools in Chesapeake Bay. A motion was made and passed, that rock or striped bass limitations be changed to the 12-12 plan, 12 inches long and 12 pounds the maximum weight limit.

This is in spite of the recommendations of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, who have made an exhaustive and far more comprehensive survey of the problem than could ever be accomplished by individuals, and who recommend that the minimum length limit be set at 16 inches, measured from tip of nose to the fork of the tail.

While the Bureau said nothing of the maximum weight limits, our personal conviction is there should be none.

Looks like the stripers are in the Potomac. C. B. See, Sunday evening between 5:30 and dark, caught three weighing about a pound and a half with a 4-ounce flyrod and night crawlers for bait. He fished the deep eddies below the falls.

CASTING EXHIBITION

Comes to our attention a note that Capt. Hawk, one of the peers of casting in America, will give an exhibition today at 5:30 p. m. at the Reflecting Pool.

This former Florida guide and boat captain knows just about everything there is to know about the art, and if you want to pick up a few pointers you'd do well to be on hand.

4 Games Tomorrow

Four games are on the Decoration Day program for teams in the Montgomery County Baseball League, highlighted by the meeting at Four Corners of the Takoma Tigers and Kensington. Other games pit Four Corners against Colesville, Rockville against Friendship and Silver Spring against Bethesda. All contests start at 3 p. m.

The nine-week, nine-team battle for the Women's District Golf Association first team championship was not decided until the last hole of the last match yesterday as Chevy Chase retained its title by a 1½-point margin over Manor in the final day's play at Kenwood.

The two teams battled neck and neck through the two-month series and the defending champions entered their final match with the Manor team, needing 4 of the 12 points to clinch the trophy.

They were assured of a tie when the first three brackets brought 3½ points, and it was strictly up to the last match where Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Washington Post Cup champion and captain of the Chevy Chase team, and Mrs. L. O. Cameron opposed Mrs. Gale E. Pugh and Mrs. J. E. Nell, of Manor.

Manor Takes Lead

The Pugh-Nell combination won the first nine for a point and for the first seven holes of the back nine the match was even. Thus on the Nassau scoring system, Manor led 2 up on the 18-hole match and needed to win one of the next two holes to tie. Mrs. Letts and Mrs. Cameron each parred the short seventeenth to send Chevy Chase 1 up, and they halved the eighteenth to win the back nine and one point of the three, clinching the trophy by 77 points to 75½ for the Norbeck Club. Manor won yesterday's match 7½ to 5½.

In the No. 1 match, Marion Brown and Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, Manor, won 2 points from Mrs. Bishop Hill and Louise Clayton, while in the second bracket Mrs. L. G. Pray, captain, and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall swept three points from Mrs. Y. E. Booker and Mrs. Landra Platt, to give Manor a good chance for an upset. However, Chevy Chase's reliable third bracket of Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. J. W. Beller, undefeated in the previous matches, scored 2½ out of 3 against Mrs. H. J. Simons and Mrs. J. R. Daily to pave the way for the final foursome's winning finish. Mrs. Hugh Rowan, who played in five matches for the winners, did not play yesterday but contributed valuable points while she was in the line-up.

Triumph for Barnett

The victory was the fifth in the ten-year history for the Chevy Chase team, and a personal triumph for Professional Robert T. Barnett, their instructor each year. Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Platt, Mrs. Booker, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Beller, Miss Houghton and Miss Clayton have been regular members of every winning team. The years were 1934, 1935, 1937, 1938 and 1940.

Congressional defeated Army and Navy, 9½ to 3½, to nose out Kenwood by a half-point for third place, while Kenwood, surprise package of the league, finished fourth, only 5½ points back of the champions. The hosts drew a bye yesterday. Army and Navy was assured of fifth place before the final day's play.

Washington blanked Argyle, 12-0, to top the second division with 36 points while Columbia and Woodmont tied, 6-6, to allow the Columbians to finish 5½ points ahead of Woodmont in seventh place. Argyle finished ninth with 3½ points.

Mrs. Judson C. Dale, District team captain, and a member of the Kenwood team, released the final standings.

The second and third team championships had already been decided, with Chevy Chase also second team champions and Manor third.

Entries Close For Scholastic Golf Tonight

Frank Emmet, Devitt Prep faculty member, will close the entries for the scholastic golf championship tonight, with the qualifying round slated at noon Friday at Kenwood Club.

A field of 50 or more is expected to compete for the 16 qualifying places in the championship flight, with the first two match play rounds carded Saturday morning at Manor and the semifinals and finals Sunday at Congressional with the title round starting around noon.

Emmet, who has personally conducted the six previous championships, is accepting entries at his home, 4921 Thirtieth place northwest. Schoolboy golfers in good scholastic standing and who have been eligible for competition this season, are eligible.

The original Washington Post trophy will go to the winner's school for a year, while the new champion, who will succeed Ralph Bogart, will receive a 15-inch trophy for permanent possession. A District Golf Association official will present the trophy Sunday afternoon. The scholastic golf association will provide cups for the medalist and runner-up.

The advisory committee includes District Golf Association President Dr. R. A. Keilty, Secretary Dr. W. C. Barr and Professionals George Diffenbaugh, Al Treder and Wiffy Cox. Emmet, Julian Coangelo, Anacostia, Cres Bride, Blair, and Allan Vogt, Bethesda, comprise the executive committee

Colonial Nine Playes Middies

Annapolis, May 28.—Navy's baseball team takes the field tomorrow against George Washington University of Washington, in the final preliminary game before meeting West Point. It will be the Colonials' last contest of the season.

The Middies are winding up one of their poorest diamond seasons in a number of years, having won only 5 of 18 games. Three of these came in a row this month. The Army lads have not done so swell either, so that the outcome of the coming battle should be pretty much of a toss-up.

Valley Forge Pin Team Sets Mark

Valley Forge Beer bowling team came back to Washington last night after one of the most scintillating performances ever registered in the annual Cumberland Pin Tournament at Hagerstown, Md.

The five-man team, composed of Ed Keith, Bob Micinotti, Lou Jenkins, Andy Gleeson and Ray Parks, toppled a total of 1931 maples to break the tournament mark by a single pin.

Little Determined to Erase National Open Failure of '36

Current Medalist With Record 65 Round Didn't Qualify in His First Venture

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 28.—Broad shouldered Lawson Little, who's known the heartbreak that golf can bring, is ready to carry the load that's had him staggering around four straight years.

Four years ago this month, Little ran into the most crushing disappointment of his fairways career. Winner of the United States and British Amateur titles in 1934 and 1935, he failed to qualify for the 1936 National Open championship in his first venture as a professional. And the boys "put the finger" on him as another amateur who didn't have it in fast professional company.

Today he's a different Lawson Little—a player confident his game at last is ready to gain him ranking with the best pros of the day. Yesterday at Olympia Fields he put together rounds of 65 and 69 over two tough courses to show the way to more than 1,100 players who tried to qualify for the Open championship June 6-8 at Canterbury Golf Club near Cleveland.

"From 1936 on I spent about three years on an exhibition tour," Little said, "and I know now that this was too much golf. It got so that every round was just another round to be played as quickly as possible—a state of mind bad for any golf game. So I took a six months' rest and then won the Los Angeles Open last January.

"Since then I've been playing well. Yesterday my putting was smooth (he one-putted 10 of the first 12 greens on his way to his record 65) and my irons were working. I've played Canterbury and know that iron play is going to win that Open title."

Little is going to Cleveland Thursday to start practicing. But he'll first try his shots at the Cleveland Country Club rather than at Canterbury. It was on the Cleveland course that he won the 1935 National Amateur and Lawson believes he has a chance to recapture "that old amateur feeling" and take it with him to Canterbury come a week from Thursday. If he does he may have his revenge on the title that's mocked him for four years.

Hogan Leads 1940 Golfers In Earnings

BEN HOGAN

Has Inside Track For Vardon Trophy; Demaret Is Next

Boston, May 28 (AP).—Ben Hogan, the sensation of the winter golfing tours who failed yesterday to qualify for the National Open championship, today stood as both the leading 1940 money winner and as the pacesetter for the Harry Vardon Trophy.

The latest figures compiled by Fred Corcoran, the P. G. A. tournament bureau manager, credit Hogan with a total of $7,888 in prizes to date, a result of finishing in the money in all of the 16 tournaments in which he has started this year. That performance has increased his Vardon award points to 280—13 more than his closest rival, Jimmy Demaret, a fellow Texan.

Demaret, winner of six major tourneys, has won $7,777. Bryon Nelson, of Toledo, Ohio, stands third on the prize money list with $4,813. Craig Wood, winner of the recent Metropolitan Open with an all-time record 72-hole total of 264, is fourth with $3,958, and Sam Snead, the 1938 Vernon winner, is fifth with $3,656.

The other leading money winners are Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, $3,350; Horton Smith, of Chicopee, Mass., $3,100; Lawson Little, of Bretton Woods, N. H., $2,992; Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., $2,931, and Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., $2,650.

Wood has 201 points in the Vardon standing, the other leaders being Nelson and Snead with 133 each, Dick Metz, of Chicago, 114; Smith, 99; Runyan, 92; Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, Long Island, 88; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., 87; Toney Penna, of Dayton Ohio, 70, and Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, 1937-38 National Open titlist 69.

Randle's Queen, at $60.80, Wins Feature at Charles Town

Mare Leads All the Way In Big Upset

Jockey Bletzacker Rides 2d Winner Of Career; Lena Girl Gets Place Money

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Randle's Queen, owned by U. S. Randle, of Washington, forged to the front early and stayed there to the end of a race over the local 6-furlong course, much to the surprise of the turf fans gathered here this afternoon. Making her third start on any race track, the daughter of Espino and a close relative of the great mare, Esposa, Randle's Queen was despised in the betting and paid a $60.80 mutuel to a scattered few.

In the select group that cashed was Apprentice Jockey M. Bletzacker, Owner Randle having purchased a $5 pasteboard for the youngster who had ridden only one winner before. He had been home in front last winter in an obscure race in Havana. Today, he did his stuff in the featured Camden on Gauley.

The blue and orange silks of Owner Randle, not as well known as his many blue ribbons won in horse shows hereabouts, finished a length and a half in advance of Lena Girl, with Cut Emerald third. Only two others competed in the battle fought over a heavy, holding track. The winner's time was 1:23.

Forges Ahead

Randle's Queen hesitated just after the break but her apprentice rider, a Somersett, Ohio, boy soon got her into action and she went around the outside of the leaders to forge to the front. From that point to the end, it was a case of "no catchers." Miny Mo, Cut Emerald and finally Lena Girl tried to displace the Espino filly but she was to have her day.

The program opened with the longest mutuel price of the meeting to date. Welsh Star, a son of Prince of Wales, decided to run and bounded off with the short sprint by four lengths to bring his backers a $91.20 mutuel. Among others, the 4-year-old downed Nathan Hale and Stubbs, the latter a former stake horse, making his first start in a long time.

Butcher Boy, owned by B. W. Dulaney and saddled by Dion K. Kerr, jr., both Washingtonians, won the second race at a $9 mutuel and set the stage for a $34.40 daily double. Crusand put the finishing touches on the transaction in the third event and paid $6.40. The winner was much the best and survived a bumping from Blind Talk which finished third. Jockey W. Nertney was suspended for ten days for rough riding as a result of the foul.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WELSH STAR, $91.20, $53.60, $13.80; NATHAN HALE, $8.80, $4.20; STUBBS, $3.20.

WELSH STAR, showing sudden improvement, saved ground inside of STUBBS to get to front, kept on inside and drew out while kept to pressure to end. NATHAN HALE was hard ridden while forwardly placed and held on gamely at close. STUBBS had keen early foot to take command, but bore out at turns and was tiring at end. DABS was hard ridden and had no excuses. DEAR GRACIE had some early lick and faded. SMADA could not keep up.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:09½. Off 3:10½. Winner, B. W. Dulaney's b. c. (2), by Way Gold—Lady Slavey. Trained by D. K. Kerr, jr. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTCHER BOY, $9.00, $4.80, $3.40; HEROLLS, $4.80, $3.60; SMART LAD, $8.00.

BUTCHER BOY had speed to go to front at once, drew clear of SECRETA without effort, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of HEROLLS. The latter, uncertain of footing, was forwardly placed from break and closed ground under vigorous handling. SMART LAD raced greenly and came willing at close. SECRETA could not keep up after showing speed to stretch. BACK BAY had early speed and stopped. DANZIG could not stay after opening eighth.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35½. Off 3:36½. Winner, Mrs. U. Webb's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRUSAND, $6.40, $3.60, $3.00; BUBBLEWORTH, $3.20, $2.60; BLIND TALK, $3.40.

CRUSAND, much the best, set early pace, was bothered by BLIND TALK leaving backstretch, was taken up and to outside and wore down BUBBLEWORTH in final sixteenth. BUBBLEWORTH was rated while close, came wide for racing room to get to front, but could not resist winner. BLIND TALK was close to pace of CRUSAND from start, lugged into inside at half pole and closed gamely. SOUR CHERRY saved ground and closed with good energy.

Daily Double, BUTCHER BOY and CRUSAND, Paid $34.40

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02½. Off 4:03½. Winner, E. H. Titmus, jr.'s ch. m. (5), by Brandon Mint—Curiosity Box. Trained by S. Fiammia. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:25⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANDORAMINT, $21.60, $9.00, $4.80; SUNNY ROSE, $27.60, $11.00; TAVERN, $4.00.

PANDORAMINT, forced to front early, saved ground while setting pace and was placed to punishment through stretch to last ahead of SUNNY ROSE. The latter, off slowly, came wide for racing room, moved up gamely through stretch and barely missed. TAVERN was forward factor from break, came to inside to move menacingly, but weakened. DOCTOR'S NURSE dropped back in stretch run. BARRACA could not reach contention. WAHCOO was hustled to keep up early and dropped out of it.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:30½. Off 4:32. Winner, U. S. Randle's b. f. (3), by Espino—Glorify. Trained by L. Crain. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANDLE'S QUEEN, $60.80, $13.60, $5.80; LENA GIRL, $3.80, $3.00; CUT EMERALD, $3.20.

RANDLE'S QUEEN was hard ridden to get to front in opening quarter, drew out, but had to be kept to pressure to hold LENA GIRL safe in closing sixteenth. LENA GIRL lacked early speed, worked way to contention and was gaining gradually at end. CUT EMERALD was off slowly, was sent to contention under hustling tactics and weakened badly. MINY MO had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:55½. Off 4:56½. Winner, F. D. Massey's br. f. (3), by Grand Ace—Daisy Carter. Trained by C. Massey. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK ACE, $10.00, $7.00, $9.00; MOLASSES JULIA, $5.00, $3.40; HIGH AIM, $5.80.

DARK ACE was sent to contention under urging, bumped horses getting to front and held MOLASSES JULIA safe in closing test. The latter was taken up going to first turn, moved up gradually and was held safe. HIGH AIM closed full of energy. GROUCHY had early speed and faltered. CONGO PRINCE stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:22½. Off 5:23. Winner, Mrs. T. Lewis' b. m. (3), by Sun God II—Wine Jug. Trained by T. Lewis. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:56⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODWINE, $5.00, $3.40, $2.80; KISSIN KID, $5.00, $3.40; BACKINTIME, $4.80.

GOODWINE, off alertly and nicely rated while saving ground and setting pace, was not threatened at any stage and won easily. KISSIN KID worked way up on inside and could not menace winner, but was best of others. BACKINTIME was in thick of early contention and weakened suddenly. PETE SAND tired. DANCING CLOUD forced early pace and stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:49½. Off 5:50. Winner, Bill Bennings' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF EVERGREEN, $11.60, $6.20, $3.60; LAKE SHORE, $8.40, $4.60; BLOX, $3.40.

CHIEF EVERGREEN, away alertly, saved ground while closest to pace of BLOX, took command when shaken up, opened good lead and was put to intermittent punishment in closing furlong. LAKE SHORE lacked early speed, worked way to serious contention on inside and closed gamely. BLOX was taken to front at once, was steadied while setting pace, but could not stay when placed to drive. AUPOIN was well placed for three-quarters and tired. PENCADER was not prominent.

Charles Town Selections

Dear Al:

Dogs, monkeys, goats, roosters, poll parrots, cats and geese are some of the mascots around the racing stables. To the layman these would appear to be only excess baggage. They have to be fed and they have to be transported from track to track. But these mascots have their job to do and most of them perform nobly. In some cases, the dogs are used as watchmen. The subject was brought up in Racing Secretary Fred Burton's office yesterday. Burton, who used to train horses, said that he remembers a certain horse whose entry had been refused for bad post actions. "This horse not only tried to bite every horse within reach but he was murderous in his stall. It was necessary to tie him down to shoe him," said Burton. "I had a little Scotch Terrier puppy and one day he ran into the horse's stall. We thought this was going to be the last of him. The horse kicked at the puppy and then tried to bite him. The puppy looked up in the horse's face and barked with all his might. Then the unexpected happened. The horse grabbed the puppy by the back of his neck and lifted him up and tossed him through the half door. The puppy ran back into the stall and the horse repeated the action. It wasn't long before the puppy and the horse were fast friends. The horse quieted down, stopped his bad post manners and even allowed his handlers to come into the stall. The improvement in his disposition was such that he began winning." I believe that some of these "onery cusses" among horses are that way only because they are lonesome, that is when they are kindly treated by their handlers. Delaware Park joins the East's racing line-up today. The sport now reaches from here to New England and its mutuels all the way now that New York has swung over.

BURTON

BILL.

First race—Seplin appears to be slightly best of those gathered for this event. Breaks off the rail but has the speed to get clear. Osofree has shown a liking for the course and will be a keen factor. Devils Broth had a rough trip last out and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Butterman turned in a bang-up effort last out and all but downed Roman Boy. This one likes the short sprint rout. Brush Hook won his last despite being all over the racetrack. There will be a change of riders and he will be dangerous if he does not run out. Baliris has plenty of speed.

Third race—I'm going to take a shot at Sail By in this field. I'm confident this one is better than shown. Stand By is a tough old rascal and will be right in there knocking. Reigh Tetrarch for the show end.

Fourth race—Time Row showed a world of early speed last out and might have needed that race. If you don't like them long, skip this one. The Bennings Stable sends Germans out again with a big question mark attached. I believe he will be right there if not the winner. Cautious Bo belongs in the money.

Fifth race—Caidon was beaten off when outrun early in that last. Has the speed to get to the top of this gang and I'm going to string along. The Bowman entry of Schley Buck and Schley Goree is formidable. Walter Light for the minor award.

Sixth race—Stealing Home gets the edge in this rather open affair. With the right handling, this could be the right one. Lernana gets in light, thanks to the apprentice allowance, and is a threat. Tepin could be the third one.

Seventh race—Trixie Lass breaks off the rail and may be the one to catch in this distance affair. Lady Cirek's last was marked by poor racing luck. Trostar and Channing are getting good but carry 117 pounds each.

Eighth race—The Swagman indicated his fitness in his most recent race, finishing a close-up second. Needs only the right handling. Heart Play has shown he is ready. War Rumor has been stopping but has been known to go on.

Substitute race—Kissin Bug, Margie Wrack and Happy Miracle is the way I prefer them if this race is used.

DELAWARE PARK

1—Ball Aross, No Embargo, Wake.
2—War Streak, Apprehend, Missfexit.
3—Buckelle, Long Lane, Turn Table.
4—Hi Kid, Gala Quest, True Knightess.
5—Birch Rod, Bucking, Boston Pal.
6—Armor Bearer, Sun Egret, Honey Cloud.
7—Presidential, Portunus, Bounding Count.
8—Howard, Scarlet O., Blue Sheets.

Best bet—Presidential.

Hazel Lee Wins Lincoln Feature

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—E. E. Fogelson's Hazel Lee, chestnut filly, won the featured mile claiming race at Lincoln Fields today, paying $5, $3.20 and $2.80.

Following the victor by five lengths was Cantata and Panjab in that order. Hazel Lee's time was 1:49 4-5 on a wet strip made slow by heavy rains.

Irving McCann Reviews NLRB For Realtors

Former Examiner Outlines Defects In Labor Policies

The National Labor Relactions Act was reviewed yesterday for Washington realtors by Irving G. McCann, former trial examiner with NLRB, at a meeting of Washington Real Estate Board at Mayflower Hotel. Discussing the act, the speaker, a former assistant to the Attorney General and specialist in labor problems, said when it was passed five years ago by an ill-advised Congress as a panacea for all industrial woes, hearings were relatively brief. Most of the witnesses who testified in favor of the proposed legislation before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor heartily approved its objectives.

A few witnesses saw the dangers inherent in some of its provisions and warned against its passage, he reminded, Dr. Willard E. Hotchkiss, president of Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, Ill., and Dr. Gus W. Dyer, of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., being among these.

Dr. Hotchkiss said: "It is a ticklish thing to create a new set of offenses in the law . . . I must say that I look with a little bit of misgiving on the creation of this formidable body as a permanent feature, with all due respect to you, Senator (Wagner)."

With keenest foresight Dr. Dyer criticized some provisions of the act, saying, in part, "The employer is the only man in all the world who is considered in this bill as dangerous to his employes' welfare. He is the only man whom it is necessary to restrain by law from advising his employes. His enemies, and the enemies of his employes, . . . are unrestrained, and the employer is prohibited by this bill from attempting to restrain them from coming to his plant and abusing the employer, slandering him, lying on him, and destroying his reputation and standing with his employes.

"If he opens his mouth in protest, he is guity of a criminal act and is subject to punishment under this bill. A labor agent acting in the interest of a competitor would have an unrestrained right to come to the plant of the employer, organize his employes and bring about a state of discord that would destroy his business, and the employer would have no right to even attempt to prevent the outrage. Under this proposed law it would be hazardous for an employer to even talk to his employes . . . "

In less than five years, according to the speaker, fears of Dr. Hotchkiss and propheeies of Dr. Dyer have come true. For two years, three committees of the Senate and House have sat for months, considering numerous amendments to the act, and investigating charges of maladministration by the National Labor Relations Board. These records containing thousands of pages and millions of words constitute an encyclopedia of errors, which are catalogued in part at least by the intermediate report of the Smith committee.

Citing a few general findings of a majority of this committee, Mr. McCann said, there are many more specific ones showing maladministration of the act by the board, bias and incompetence of its employes and "certain practices" which "apparently go beyond the language, scope and intent of the act." Despite these revelations, he concluded, net result of all Congressional hearings to date is: (1) Slight changes by the National Labor Relations Board in its rules and regulations; and (2) Not a single Congressional amendment to the act to the present time.

Canadian Gold Boosts Exports To U. S. Vaults

By the Associated Press

A huge Canadian shipment boosted gold imports in the week ended May 22 to $164,906,059, nearly $65,000,000 larger than the preceding week.

Canada shipped $128,983,239 of gold. This was believed by officials to be part of the British program of paying for war supplies. Other empire shipments included $11,633,637 from the United Kingdom, $5,023,720 from Australia, $5,100.585 from South America and $2,301.843 from Hongkong.

Other large shipments included $2,950,335 from Hungary, $2,728,026 from Italy, $3,222,170 from the Netherlands and $1,233,346 from the Philippine Islands. Part of the imported gold was deposited with other foreign gold held under earmark in the Federal Reserve banks, and the net total of these deposits increased by $17,245,291 during the week to about $1,275,000,000.

Silver imports amounted to $1,268,155, including $503,335 from Mexico, $231,214 from Chile, $105,739 from Peru, $295,672 from Japan and $41,685 from Canada.

Aviation Firm Files Stock Offer

Continental Aviation & Engineering Corporation, Detroit, a company organized May 13 to develop "high output" airplane engines, filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering 370,000 shares of $1 par common stock.

The corporation disclosed that it had been formed to take over from Continental Motors Corporation all of its business in connection with airplane engines of 500-horsepower and over. The property acquired in addition to plant and equipment included four uncompleted orders from the War Department and one from the Navy for development programs on which there was an aggregate unexpended balance of $750,000. The SEC was advised that information regarding the orders was secret because it concerned national defense.

Germany to Pay On Young Loan

New York, May 28 (AP).—The German consulate general announced today that American holders of 5½ per cent international loan bonds of 1930 (Young loan) would be paid settlements on their coupons June 1. "The purchase price," said the consulate, "will be $20 per $27.50 face amount of the coupon."

Exchange Markets

New York, May 28 (AP).—The British pound closed with a loss of only 1¾ cents today after news of Belgium's surrender had forced the rate down around 7 cents in opening foreign exchange trade.

The Canadian dollar showed less vigorous recuperative powers and at the finish still was down a full cent at 78⅝ United States cents. The decline brought the dominion unit to within less than a cent of the record low established late last week. The French franc dipped .01⅛ of a cent while the Swiss franc held unchanged.

Rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent. Canadian dollar in New York open market 21⅜ per cent discount, or 78.62½ United States cents.

Wheat Regains Early Losses In Uneven Day

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 28.—Capitulation of the Belgian King sent grain prices into a tailspin at the start of trading today but after blackboard quotations had been marked down 1 to 3 cents a bushel the market regained its composure and practically all of the losses were regained.

Wheat fell as much as 2¾-3¼ cents, July reaching 81 and September 80¾, within 2½ cents of the fixed minimum.

A late rally, reflecting a partial recovery in securities, some buying credited to processors and reports of repudiation of the Belgian surrender, reduced these losses materially and wheat closed ⅜-⅞ lower than yesterday; July and September, 83¼@83⅜. Corn was unchanged to ¼ down, July 63¼@63⅛; September, 62⅜@62¼. Oats, ⅛ higher. Rye, ⅛-⅜ lower, and lard, 10-18 lower.

Contract Bridge

A tendency to overstress the importance of high cards is expressed in a question from contributor H. F. H. He and a friend have disputed over the proper bid of a hand, H. F. H. favors the distribution, his partner the high cards. Here is what he says:

"A discussion has arisen (no money involved) in our particular bridge set concerning the bidding of a certain hand in a game of rubber bridge. South holds the following cards:

♠KQ
♡A975
◇KJ1097
♣92

"Neither side was vulnerable, and East, dealer, bid a heart. The point at issue is: What is South's correct bid? 'A' says that two diamonds was the correct call over one heart. 'B' claims that South should have doubled to inform partner of strength."

If we held South's hand we would bid two diamonds rather than doubling, having a natural aversion to weak overcalls born through painful experience at rubber bridge. Two diamonds would indicate a decent hand with strength in diamonds or ample playing strength at diamonds to compensate for outside weakness.

Shortage of Spades

The spade length is too slight for a double. A double asks partner to bid spades even with four cards to nothing, and it is not wise to encourage a forced bid of this kind. An overcall usually can stand a bid by partner, and if he holds some aggressive strength three no trump might be reached on this hand.

Oil Output Steady

New York, May 28 (AP).—Daily crude oil production in the United States held relatively steady during the week ended May 25, totaling 3,835,650 barrels compared with 3,835,100 barrels the previous week and 3,585,250 a year ago, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Class I Rails Report Higher Net Income

Operating Revenues In First 4 Months Double 1939 Total

Class I railroads of the United States in the first four months of 1940 had a net railway operating income of $148,929,974, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.29 per cent of their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday.

In the first four months of 1939, their net railway operating income was $101,283,692, or 1.56 per cent on their property investment, and in the first four months of 1930, their net railway operating income was $233,942,444, or 3.51 per cent on property investment.

This compilation as to earnings for the first four months of 1940 is based on reports from 133 class I railroads representing a total of 233,004 miles.

Revenues Up 10.8 Per Cent

Gross operating revenues for the first four months of 1940 totaled $1,307,421,578, compared with $1,179,891,873 for the same period in 1939, and $1,761,623,106 for the same period in 1930, an increase of 10.8 per cent in 1940 above 1939. Operating expenses for the first four months of 1940 amounted to $992,271,731, compared with $921,547,460 for the same period in 1939. Operating expenses for the first four months of 1940 were 7.7 per cent more than in the same period of 1939.

Class I railroads in the first four months of 1940 paid $122,849,238 in taxes compared with $113,851,765 in the same period in 1939. For the month of April alone, the tax bill of the class I railroads amounted to $30,910,978, an increase of $3,148,344, or 11.3 per cent above April, 1939.

26 Run at Deficit

Twenty-six class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first four months of 1940, of which 7 were in the Eastern district, 5 in the Southern district and 14 in the Western district.

Class I railroads in April, 1940, had a net railway operating income of $33,822,211, or 2 per cent on investment compared with a net operating income of $15,323,766, or 0.90 per cent in April, 1939.

Gross operating revenues for April amounted to $321,439,310, compared with $282,117,754 in April, 1939. Operating expenses in April totaled $245,817,795, compared with $227,622,288 in the same month in 1939, and $344,194,247 in April, 1930.

Exchange Seat Brings $42,000, 25-Year Low

New York, May 28 (AP).—The lowest price for a New York Stock Exchange seat in 25 years was recorded today when the exchange announced arrangements had been made for sale of a membership at $42,000, down $1,000 from the previous sale. In 1915, before the World War bull market in stocks and commodities boomed trading, a seat sold as low as $38,000.

Ship Insurance Halted

New York, May 28 (AP).—American marine insurance underwriters today withdrew all rate schedules for war-risk insurance on shipments between the Western Hemisphere and the English east coast north of Southampton and the French coast north of Brest. The underwriters announced that shippers desiring war-risk coverage on such voyages could obtain rates "only on application."

Liverpool Hesitant

Liverpool, May 28 (AP).—Trading in cotton futures today was confined almost entirely to liquidation of open contracts. Transactions were permitted only at the settlement prices of May 16. No spot quotations were issued.

Tool Builders Ready to Meet Defense Challenge, Leaders Say

Cleveland, May 28 (AP).—The machine tool industry has "succeeded in fulfilling by far the major share" of current requirements of United States aircraft engine builders, J. E. Lovely, president of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association, told the organization's spring meeting today.

"Special consideration" was paid these requirements and "delivery preferences have been given American customers," said Lovely, vice president of Jones & Lamson Machine Co., at Springfield, Vt.

Present Challenge Met

"Whereas at the end of last year two-thirds of our production was going abroad, today foreign shipments represent considerably less than half of the output of the industry . . .

"I do not mean to imply that the machine tool industry has met tomorrow's demands for tomorrow's aircraft engines or airplanes," Lovely continued. "That whole problem still lies before both the aircraft and the machine tool industry. But I do say that today the machine tool industry has met the challenge which has confronted it.

Present Equipment Cited

"To lighten the demand for new machines and spread the load in our industry over a longer period, the Government might well buy any equipment available in private industry not now vitally needed and utilize this in plants for vital needs, rather than demanding that all of the equipment for any new plant should be brand new and made immediately by our industry."

Lovely suggested private industry "cooperate with the Government in this manner, should the need for equipment for national defense become great enough to follow this plan. Our own industry could then replace this other equipment at a later date."

Stocks, Bonds, Commodities Drop Sharply At Opening on Belgian Surrender, But Late Rally Reduces Losses to 1 to 3 Points

New York, May 28.—Securities and commodities scurried for the rear in early dealings today, reflecting fear for the Allied cause because of the Belgian surrender. Breaks of 1 to 7 points in stocks, up to 15 points in foreign bonds, $2 a bale in cotton and more than 3 cents a bushel on wheat were among the results of heavy initial selling.

After the first hour, however, steadier tendencies ruled and all markets made substantial comebacks. Final prices were not far from the best levels of the day although remaining well under Monday's close.

In shares, virtually all of the steels, heavy manufacturing, metal, shipbuilding and other of the so-called war group, were the hardest hit and accounted for most of the .84 point loss in the 100 stock average at the end of the day. This index, however, was down more than 1¾ points at one time.

Potent in Bond Market

War influences were just as potent in the bond market, where United States Treasuries suffered early losses up to half a point and new lows; Canadians were in new low ground; Belgians sold off sharply, and German, Italian and Japanese were inclined to advance. In foreign exchange dealings, sterling was down to $3.11¼ but recovered to $3.18 for a net loss of 1¼ cents. Canadian dollars were quoted at a discount of 21¼ cents. French francs dipped.

A number of large blocks of shares changed hands in the first hour. Steel common was 42¼, off 4½; General Motors, 37¼, off 3¼; Anaconda, 19, off 3, and Curtiss-Wright, 8, off ⅝. Steel common's early loss was reduced to a net drop of 1⅝. Net losses for General Motors and Anaconda were 1½ and ½, respectively.

Bethlehem sold at a low of 64, but its last price was 68½. Lockheed sank to 27½ before rising to 29¼. DuPont hammered an 8-point loss by closing at 150⅞.

Declines of a point or more on the basis of closing prices were recorded by Telephone, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, International Harvester, Great Northern preferred, Loft, Kennecott, Sears Roebuck, and Peoples Gas.

Bonds Very Heavy

The Belgian debacle served to weigh heavily on prices of most foreign and domestic bonds here today. As the price level dropped, volume of dealings rose to $6,412,000, against $3,856,000 in the previous session.

The United States Treasury bonds found new low ground, although final prices displayed recoveries of about one-half of the early losses.

Belgian obligations were extremely vulnerable but even the declines of 15 points in some issues did not always mark the reaching of the previous lows for the year. Canadians and Australians lost up to more than 4 points and in most instances established new 1940 lows. Norwegian bonds sold down. There was a distinct show of strength among German loans.

Denmark Resumes Exchange Trading

Copenhagen, May 28 (AP).—The Danish stock exchange reopened today after seven weeks' interruption. Trade was permitted only in bonds, but it was said stock sales would be permitted later. A six-month-old law limits bond price fluctuations to 1 point.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Heavy receipts of hogs forced prices in the Chicago market 25 to 40 cents lower today. The top was $5.55. The cattle market was weak and choice lambs were 15 to 25 cents higher for the week.

Hog receipts in Chicago were 23,000, or 7,000 more than expected and 8,300 more than a week ago. Big packers took an additional 11,000 direct. Receipts in the principal corn belt markets were 124,500, or more than double the total a week ago. Wholesale prices on choice fresh pork loins were unchanged at 14 cents.

The bulk of the hog run in the 200 to 270 pound class sold from $5.25 to $5.50. The top in the steer market was $11.00 on part of a load of 950-pound yearlings. Best handy-weight native springers brought $12.15 and fat sheep were scarce and steady.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts 23,000, total 34,000. Slow; generally 25 to 40 lower than Monday average; top 5.55; bulk good and choice, 200-275 pounds, 5.25@5.50; 270-300-pound butchers, 5.10@5.35; most 300-550-pound offerings 5.00@5.20; good and choice 170-200-pound lights, 5.25@5.50; bulk good 400-500-pound packing sows, 4.15@4.50; lighter weights to 4.75.

SALABLE SHEEP—Receipts 3,000, total 6,000. Late Monday, no choice fed lambs; market steady; best handy-weight clippers 9.40; others 9.25 sorted; medium wool skins 9.75 sorted; five decks good California springers 11.25. Today's fed and springer lambs 15-25 higher for week; few decks handy-weight fed clippers 9.75; handy-weight native springers 12.15; five double California springers with around 10 per cent sorts 11.25; fat sheep scarce, steady.

SALABLE CATTLE—Receipts 8,000, salable calves 2,000; receipts exceeded expectations; general trade steers and yearlings including light heifer and mixed yearlings weak to 25, mostly 10 to 15 off; all others steady; steers predominated; killing quality mostly medium to good; choice offerings absent; order buyer and shipper demand fairly broad; good to choice packers going now, and decline in hide prices bearish influence; most fed steers 8.75@10.25; very little under 9.00, however; top 11.00 on part load 950-pound yearling steers; most weighty bullocks 10.75; stockers slow, steady; stock calves 11.50 down to 10.00; yearlings 9.25@10.00 mostly; asause bulls to 7.00; cutter cows to 6.00; vealers to 11.00.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 28 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.) Very little demand was being received for wool in Boston today. An occasional small lot was taken by mills to cover emergency requirements. Prices varied considerably, depending upon whether the wools needed were available in lots hedged by operations in the wool tops futures exchange. Small lots of 12-months Texas wools have been moved at 80 to 85 cents, scoured basis, to worsted manufacturers, while hedged lots of 12-months Texas wools were offered at 72 to 73 cents, scoured basis.

Naval Stores

Warner Bros. Net Declines 4 Cts. a Share

Kroger Grocery Notes 9 Per Cent Increase In Sales Volume

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Warner Bros. Pictures Inc. and subsidiaries today reported net profit for the 26 weeks ended February 24 of $1,518,497, equal after dividend requirements for the period on the $3.85 preferred stock (in arrears) to 35 cents a common share. This compared with $1,665,889, or 39 cents on common, in the comparable period a year earlier. Last dividend on the preferred was paid in 1932.

Kroger Grocery

Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. reported a 9 per cent increase in sales for the fifth four-week period of 1940 over the same part of 1939. Totals were $21,048,261 and $19,244,492, respectively. Cumulative sales aggregated $97,965,762, or 7 per cent above $91,660,359 in 1939.

Vacuum Cleaners

Electric vacuum cleaner sales declined in April to 170,209 against 178,129 in March, the Vacuum Cleaner Manufacturers Association reported. April sales, however, were 36.08 per cent above the April, 1939 figure, of 125,026, Executive Secretary C. G. Frantz reported.

Ohio Match

The directors of Ohio Match Co. decided today not to act on a common dividend. A dividend of 25 cents a share was paid March 15.

National Sugar

National Sugar Refining Co. directors announced no action was taken on a capital stock dividend because "existing conditions are so unusual." Previous payment was 25 cents last October.

American-Hawaiian Steamship

Directors of American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. ordered an extra dividend of 50 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents, both payable June 29 to holders of record June 15.

Santa Fe Railway

Directors of Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. authorized a dividend of $2.50 a share on the 5 per cent noncumulative preferred stock, payable August 1 to holders of record June 27.

Cotton Regains Heavy Losses, Ends 6 to 19 Off

New York, May 28 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 6 to 19 points lower today—the best levels of the session—after furious opening selling pounded quotations down nearly 50 points. Announcement Belgium had yielded to the Nazis touched off the heaviest flood of opening liquidation since the start of the European War. Close to 30,000 bales of cotton were disposed of at the start, principally by foreign accounts.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures about faced after a sharp early sell-off inspired by war news early today but at the close the list still was down 9 to 14 points. Sales totaled 103 lots: July, 6.00 bid; September, 6.08; October, 6.06; December, 6.10. Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5 cents a pound in the Southeast and Valley and 4⅞ cents in Texas.

Foreign Markets

London, May 28 (AP).—Trading was a matter of direct negotiation in the securities market today after jobbers had sharply lowered prices. Little business was done while the "city" tried to adjust itself to the Belgian surrender. Business in industrial leaders lessened a bit near the close at declines averaging 1 shilling. British government bonds showed losses of around 2 per cent at the opening but later these were halved. Golds and base metals were particularly weak.

Paris.—Losses of 2 to 4 per cent were general in the bourse today in the wake of latest war news. Steel, chemical and base metal stocks declined still further. Coal mining issues affected by war operations in mining areas could not be quoted. Mediterranean issues declined moderately. Royal Dutch was a bright spot, with a gain of more than 2 per cent. Rentes ended 90 to 195 centimes lower.

6 Killed, 1 Hurt As U. S. Bomber Crashes in West

March Field, Calif., May 28 (AP).—Two officers and a crew of four in a Douglas bomber were killed last night in a crash near Mojave, Calif.

One man, Sergt. John B. Stewart, of Midway, Ala., survived the crash but he was injured seriously.

Those killed were: Second Lieut. Jess A. Smith, 30; Second Lieut. Charles A. Nisbett, 25; Sergt. Thurman T. Owens, Pvt. Wayne G. Kaufman, Pvt. Doyle H. Bean, and Pvt. Eugene A. Schulz.

The plane, a B-18 Douglas bomber of the thirty-fourth bombardment group, was on a night bombing mission when the crash occurred about 10 o'clock at Muroc Dry Lake, which is the Army's bombing range in the Mojave desert.

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman on WOL Today at 5:30 P. M. — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

SUPERMAN HAS FIVE MINUTES IN WHICH TO DIG UP ENOUGH MONEY TO TAKE CARE OF THESE BANK DEPOSITORS, AND TWO MINUTES HAVE PASSED ALREADY!—CAN HE MAKE IT?
NOT A CHANCE!
ALONG THE HIGHWAY STREAKS SUPERMAN AT HURRICANE SPEED...!
...THE ARMORED TRUCK, LADEN WITH IT'S MILLION DOLLAR CARGO, SETS OUT FOR THE CITY OF METROPOLIS!
ONE MINUTE HAS PASSED!
WHAT ARE WE WAITING FOR? LET'S CRASH INTO THE BANK!
NO! DON'T! —YOU GAVE YOUR WORD AND THERE ARE STILL FOUR MINUTES TO GO!
SHE'S RIGHT! WE'LL WAIT UNTIL THE TIME IS UP!

JOE PALOOKA — He'll Be Okay — BY HAM FISHER

HE SEEMS TO HAVE RECEIVED A TERRIBLE BEATING. NO ORDINARY FISTS COULD DO IT—APPARENTLY SOMETHING ELSE WAS USED—HE'S STILL DAZED.
BUT—HE'LL BE ALL RIGHT IF HE HAS PLENTY OF REST AND CARE.
WE'LL TAKE 'IM WITH US. HE'LL GIT THE BEST CARE IN THE WORLD. YOU KIN TREAT 'IM—WE AINT FAR AWAY.
THAT WILL BE FINE. I'LL BRING HIM OVER TOMORROW OR THE NEXT DAY. SOON AS HE'S ABLE TO BE MOVED.
BUT—CAN'T WE SEE 'IM?
I'D LIKE T'QUESTION 'IM DOC.
PLEASE TELL 'IM WE WAS HERE.
GIVE 'IM TH' BEST DOC. I'LL PAY FER TH' WORKS.
ALL RIGHT BOYS—ALL RIGHT—NOW GO ON BACK—I'LL BRING 'IM OVER SOON.

WINNIE WINKLE — Public Rehearsal — BY BRANNER

WHEW, IT'S HOT IN THIS THEATRE!
Y'DON'T CALL THIS BARN A THEATRE, DO YOU?
WELL, I'LL OPEN UP ALL THE DOORS AND LET SOME AIR IN!
WE'VE GOT TO TIME THE SHOW, SO NO CUTTING! EVERYBODY GO THROUGH YOUR ACTS JUST AS YOU WILL TONIGHT! PLACES, EVERYBODY—OVERTURE, PETE! CURTAIN, BILL!
HOORAY!
THEM ACROBATS IS FUNNY!
QUIT CHA SHOVIN'!
HAW! HAW!
AN' THEM SEALS—WASN'T THEY SMART?
LOOK AT THAT!
MAY 29.

MR. AND MRS. — All Men Know How It Is — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

I'M ASHAMED OF YOU. THE VERY IDEA!
WHAT IDEA?
LOOK AT YOUR CUFFS. HOW WRINKLED THEY ARE. AND HOW DIRTY!
CLEAN THIS MORNING
DO YOU MEAN TO SAY THAT SHIRT WAS CLEAN THIS MORNING?
SURE I DO. RIGHT OUT OF THE DRAWER
THEN YOU DIDN'T SCRUB YOUR WRISTS WITH SOAP AND A BRUSH
I DID SO! A SHIRT NEVER LASTS MORE THAN A DAY, ANYHOW

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

LOOK AT THE LITTLE BEAR CUB I FOUND PLAYING IN THE MUD. HE'S JUST AS TAME AS A KITTEN. I'M GOING TO GIVE HIM A BATH.
GOLLY!- IT'S TH' PANDA!-

JANE ARDEN — Jealousy — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

EVEN THE COLUMNISTS ARE WRITING ABOUT YOU—GREAT STUFF—
SHE'S GETTING MORE SPACE THAN I AM—THAT'S NOT RIGHT!
KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON—THIS LOVE ANGLE IS GREAT STUFF—BUT THEY'LL FORGET ABOUT JANE WHEN I PULL OUR NEW GAG!
MORE PUBLICITY—
WHAT IS IT THIS TIME?
COME ON IN, CLARE—
YOU'RE GOING TO PULL THIS DAME OUT OF THE WATER NEXT!
GOSH—AM I?
DON'T WORRY—I CAN SWIM LIKE A FISH!

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. They take refuge during a storm in the deserted old Tucker mansion and note the resemblance of Peter to Jonathan Tucker. As the result of a fire, Peter becomes a public hero and the papers connect him with the Tucker house. John Abbott and his wife, who manage the Tucker estate, fear their deception of 25 years ago when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter a position in his law firm. Ellen is hurt when Peter says Millicent Abbott is beautiful. Mother Rosa at the orphanage helps Ellen by sending her to a famous designer, Rosalind, who hires her as a model. Peter calls for Ellen to celebrate, but when they go dinner-dancing Ellen's happiness is ended when Millicent and her friends monopolize Peter. The Abbotts decide Peter and Millicent would be a good match. Ellen models a bridal gown at Rosalind's fall show which Roger Maillard attends with his sister.

Chapter 23

MOST eligible bachelor . . . He couldn't fail to be aware of the fact, and the awareness was a perpetual irritation.

It always would be, he supposed, until he cut loose from his native surroundings and settled down to a quiet, normal life on the ranch. That would be soon now, thank heaven. As soon as Ruth's wedding was over.

The dramatic, articulate peal of the bridal chorus startled him, crystallized his thought. He looked up, curiously, toward the dais. The spectacle was certainly realistic, with that high altar effect and the candles on either side.

For an instant he had almost thought he was in church. He felt the solemn, expectant hush which prevailed as the lights in the chandelier were blotted out.

Here comes the bride.

A spotlight, subtly concealed amid the floral decorations, was focused upon the platform; other lights from within the arched alcove accented the stage.

Two bridesmaids, in shimmering, trailing gowns of russet velvet, appeared, hesitated for a brief moment and proceeded slowly down the steps. Their steps were gracefully timed to the music.

Here Comes the Bride

The second pair of bridesmaids appeared, similarly attired in velvet which was several tones lighter and more intense; the maid of honor appeared in warm, brilliant chartreuse; she held the stage for one breath-taking, tremulous moment before joining the procession down the aisle.

The music played more slowly, heightening expectancy, yet gracefully permitting a proper interlude for inspection of the advance guard.

Throughout the room, young eyes beamed in ecstatic approval, older eyes widened behind platinum-mounted lorgnettes.

She Stands Alone

There was a startled, simultaneous intake of breath. All heads turned toward the spotlight. Ellen stood alone, a small, ethereal figure in a swirl of angelic ivory.

She held her head proudly: if her cheeks were paler than usual, they were of the same soft freshness as the enormous, long-stemmed white roses which she carried; if her eyes were misted by a gentle dewiness, they reflected the candlelight with more intense and infinite appeal.

Gathers Strength

She paused, not for dramatic effectiveness, but to gather the sustaining strength to carry her forward; she was fearful and uncertain, but those who watched could not know that; quite naturally they attributed whatever hesitancy she displayed to a tender, bridal wistfulness.

Far in the rear of the salon, Roger Maillard sat up quite suddenly. His bored indifference to the occasion was banished. His eyes widened with slow delight, his lips parted in spontaneous approval.

"Who is she?" he demanded of his sister.

"I don't know her name . . ." She smiled tolerantly at his sudden, right-about-face attitude.

"Find out," he whispered urgently. "Ask that fellow."

She beckoned discreetly to Robert, who stood behind her, guarding the threshold, whispered her inquiry.

"It's a Miss Carlan," she related to her brother. "A new model."

Ellen was coming down the wide aisle, approaching them slowly. His eyes never left her for an instant. He did not see the enticing raiment which she displayed, the trailing grandeur of ivory velvet, the luster of pearls, the fragrant beauty of creamy white roses.

Two Heavenly Eyes

He saw only two heavenly beautiful eyes, tender and appealing and unbelievably blue, and he longed for the brief second when they might turn and look at him alone.

But she did not see him. She continued on her way, eyes straight ahead; she passed by him so closely that he might have reached out and touched her arm.

She joined the other models—the bridesmaids and maid of honor—in the long hallway beyond, and waited for the last chords of the bridal march. That would signal the end of the ceremony.

Then the lights would go on in the salon, and they would return for a closer scrutiny of their apparel.

Roger Maillard forgot his eager desire to leave immediately; he forgot how many debutantes and mothers of debutantes were glancing his way. He jumped to his feet and followed Ellen out of the room, pulling his sister along after him.

Rosalind's autumnal wedding was a triumphant success. No less than six orders for trousseaux had resulted from the showing, more than a dozen ivory velvet wedding dresses were ordered, each one, however, to be dramatically distinctive in style.

The shop was working day and night, and Ellen was at last given the opportunity for which she had longed.

"If you must sew," Rosalind agreed briskly, "here's your chance. I need you during the day; you're my best model now. But if you want to stay on evenings and help with the actual labor—well, it's up to you."

So she was working five nights a week, bending over one of the long sewing tables and filling in the odd jobs which more important workers had no time for.

There was, as yet, no fascination in the work. She was serving her apprenticeship in drudgery. She basted endless seams of velvet to prevent "riding" of the fabric.

Learns Sewing

She handed the seams over to the more experienced dressmakers for finishing; after that she was entrusted with pulling out the bastings. She sewed on hooks and eyes and buttons; she turned up hems.

It was not at all what she had dreamed of doing. She wanted to take the soft material into her own hands, cut it out herself and fashion it after her own ideas. She wanted accomplishment, the gratification that comes with the creation of beauty.

"That will come," Rosalind assured her one evening when ambition drove her to speak. "You've got to learn to creep before you can walk. Do each little task well, and some day you'll have your chance."

That chance did come, sooner even than Rosalind herself expected. But it came accidentally.

Meanwhile, Ellen worked and watched. She learned a great many things she had never been taught before—how to press a velvet dress without leaving a mark, how to work with fur and beads and braids, how to build up a size 40 from an original 14 to flatter the wearer.

And she was happy because she had no time for unhappiness.

Roger Maillard had phoned her every day for a week after the show. He invited her to dinner, to lunch, to the theater; finally he pleaded, at least, for the pleasure of driving her home some evening. But she was always busy. She explained the fact kindly and sincerely.

She liked him. She had only seen him for those few brief moments and at the time she was so excited and half-conscious herself that she had noticed him with a very careless interest.

To Be Continued.

District Red Cross May Increase Goal Of Funds to Help Refugees in War Zone

National Agency Reports Over a Third Of Objective Reached

As Red Cross chapters throughout the Nation were urged last night to double their quotas for the European war-relief fund, there came the possibility that the District chapter might increase it present goal of $150,0000.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, in telegrams to 3,700 chapters, said that "the greatest tragedy in all history" demanded that the "only limitation should be the maximum generosity of the American people."

He said the $10,000,000 national quota should be regarded only as a minimum immediate objective. "Chapters should then go on and where possible double their quotas," Davis said. He added that it is "impossible to describe the pitiful plight of millions of refugees in France."

U. S. Fund $3,500,000

As $6,823.21 in contributions yesterday brought the District fund to $46,397.08 of its original $150,000 quota, the national fund had swelled to nearly $3,500,000.

The largest individual contribution here yesterday was $1,000 from Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Belin. Other large donations came from Princess Margaret Boncompagni, $500; Mrs. W. McKee Dunn, $300; former Justice and Mrs. J. Harry Covington, $250, and Mrs. B. W. Parker, $200.

The Treasury Department, for the second consecutive day, topped the contributions from organizations with $1,020.01.

Three new appointments were made yesterday in the Red Cross drive. Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, was named chairman of the Army Women's Production Unit for War Relief Work. Arthur Gray, display manager at Lansburgh's, was appointed chairman of displays for the District's drive. Mrs. Oscar Coolican was made chairman of the instructions, cutting and assembling committee of garment production.

Along with the day's donations came inklings of sacrificial gifts. A 6-year-old boy brought his $3 savings to a downtown Red Cross booth and asked that it go "to little French children."

O. S. Lund, manager of the District chapter, told of a shabbily-dressed woman who came to headquarters. The person at the information desk thought she had come to ask for help. Instead, she unfolded $10 which she and her husband had managed to save up but which they couldn't spend on themselves for thinking of the suffering in Europe.

Today a shipment of 12,000 surgical dressings, 210 knitted garments, 36 layettes and 205 dresses for women and girls will be sent from the District Chapter to New York to go on the "mercy ship" sailing for Europe in a few days.

Meanwhile, a new sewing unit was organized yesterday at the Department of Agriculture by women who work there.

"Next week we plan to organize groups to make surgical dressings in the evenings—women who work during the day," Lund said yesterday.

Already more than 2,000 women in the District are doing volunteer work, with approximately 80 groups organized for sewing and knitting, she said.

The Ladies of the Senate production unit yesterday at its final meeting of the season saw the presentation of four awards to members for outstanding service. Four special posters were presented to them by Lund.

The knitting award went to Mrs. Alva B. Adams, of Colorado, for 167 hours of work; the sewing award to Mrs. Howard Sutherland, of West Virginia, 85 hours; the surgical dressing award to Mrs. John M. Robsion, of Kentucky, 40 hours. In addition, a special "fetch and carry" award went to Thomas E. Harty, chauffeur to the Vice President, who has spent many hours taking materials and finished products between the Senate Office Building and Red Cross headquarters.

Included in the hundreds of dollars that were received yesterday at Red Cross headquarters for war relief was a contribution of $50.30 raised by students at Potomac School, 2144 California street northwest. Heading a delegation of six students, Eugenia Chase presented the money to Mrs. Dwight Davis, newly appointed director of the volunteer service. Others in the picture are Clara Mills, Barbara Barry, Florence Walker, Frances McKee Dunn and Patricia Mulligan

Vanderbilt Calls Tapping Probe a 'Red Herring'

These college girls told a Senate committee investigating wire tapping yesterday they had been offered jobs by a detective who "wanted to run the Democrats out of Pennsylvania and then out of the country." The girls said they refused the jobs

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Gov. William H. Vanderbilt charged yesterday that investigation of wire-tapping in Rhode Island is being used as a "red herring" to divert public attention from municipal corruption and vote frauds in the State.

The youthful Republican executive told the special Senate committee investigating wire-tapping that he paid more than $15,000 out of his own pocket for a private inquiry into corruption charges in Rhode Island.

Vanderbilt insisted he had not authorized his investigators, the Frank Bielaski Agency of New York City, to tap any phone wires. Several months after the investigation began he learned that wires leading into the homes of the attorney general, a Republican, and the Democratic Mayor of Pawtucket had been tapped, the Governor related.

The witness imputed no political motives to the Senate committee but asserted that within Rhode Island the furore over wire-tapping has "seriously impeded justice and diverted the State grand jury's investigation of municipal corruption and vote frauds."

These frauds, he said, include activities of politicians in the "certain election districts where 111 per cent of the voters voted.

"And that is certainly getting out the vote," he added.

"Getting it out and getting it around," commented Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana.

Earlier yesterday Committee Counsel William P. Maloney placed on the stand two attractive University of Pennsylvania coeds who said they had been offered $200-a-month jobs by Basil A. Needham, a Bielaski agent, to lead "a healthy outdoor life with Democratic politicians."

Needham told the girls in 1939, they testified, that he was gaming "material" for the next election at the request of interests "anxious to get the Democrats out of Pennsylvania." Salaries and expenses were to be paid by "some of the most prominent Republicans in the State," the girls said they were informed.

The girls were Virginia Stentz, of Uniontown, Pa., and Virginia Campbell, of Philadelphia. They said Needham was "rather vague about their duties, but indicated that the daily routine would include, golf, card games, cocktail parties, dinner and the theater. They did not accept the job.

New Jersey G. O. P. Split Over Dewey

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., May 28.—New Jersey's 32-member delegation to the Republican National Convention organized today amid subsurface discord on whether they were bound to support the Presidential candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey.

Dewey, New York County district attorney, ran high in the State's preferential primary election last Tuesday, but Wendell L. Willkie, utilities magnate, received thousands of write-in votes as a result of a campaign started by admirers a short time before election day. Scattered votes were cast for others.

The Republican State committee last February expressed desire that its compromise slate of four delegates-at-large to the convention follow the wishes of the Republican voters as evidenced by returns in the State's preferential primary.

Many State committee members said they "hoped" the 28 district delegates and their alternates would follow the lead of the "big four." Today, Daniel E. Pomeroy, of Englewood, national Republican committeeman and a "big four" member, said that as he viewed it the district representatives had "no choice."

The Pleasant Way to Correct Constipation
Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?
If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew!
Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.
